

"Penn State; And Back To Penn State--It's Great!"

Paul Whiteman and his band for rhythmic music; Don Bestor for dreamy waltzes. White Kaufman's music makes for lively fox trots. Gold-Lette's super-ten for an euphonic evening, but for a four-in-one entertainment, well—

What if he was only a small-town tender with a small-town band; what if he wasn't forging ahead? He played at plenty of local dances, yes, but that wasn't his ambition.

"I'm shooting high. Most anyone can pick up a college band and dribble around a bit. I'm getting out of this."

So in the middle of his junior year at Penn State, 1921, the curly-headed orchestra director packed his bag, hitchhiked his brother and "the gang" and swooned down upon Ann Arbor for a whole week's engagement. Before they knew what it was all about the merry band was riding on the crest of a popular wave that has carried them to national fame. Monday it swept over the Nittany valley and plopped the sixteen "they satisfies" down in the Cathaum theatre.

The recumbent music captivated the old pals. The deafening applause of the old pals captivated him.

In all his glory, again he spoke. "Ann Arbor gave us the start, but Penn State is home. The informality and enthusiasm of the fellows was inspiring to us all. It's great," he enthused.

A six months' reign in Los Angeles and now a proposed tour of Europe when the orchestra will expand to thirty pieces, he never forgets the college he left immaturity. Never forgetful that he once attended Penn State, he always includes a Penn State song on his program. On each New Year's eve, no matter where he is, Fred Waing-Waring's Pennsylvanians—conducts a special Penn State program ending up, as the New Year is ushered, with the "Alma Mater."

Science Departments Make Staff Changes

(Continued from second page) Master of Science degree at the University of Chicago in 1921. He will become a graduate assistant in chemistry at Penn State.

New Assistants Another assistant in chemistry will be W. B. Shure, now an instructor in chemistry at Lehigh university. He received his master's degree at the University of Wisconsin. The first graduate scholar in chemistry ever appointed at Penn State will be M. A. Ross of Middleburg college.

Five graduate assistants in physics have also been appointed among whom are three Penn State men, A. W. Crinsky '25, H. B. DeVoe '26, and H. A. Henning '26. H. R. Kiehl, of Lebanon Valley college and C. N. Overmiller of Gettysburg college have also been appointed as graduate assistants. A. C. Pritchard of the University of Kentucky has been appointed as graduate scholar in physics.

C. D. Seaman '26 Gets Scarab Society Award

For general excellence in architecture, C. D. Seaman '26 was awarded the bronze medal and book presented each year to the most proficient student graduating from the School of Architecture, during the annual Scarab banquet at the Centre Hills Country club last Wednesday night.

Professor A. L. Koehler, head of the Department of Architecture, announced the winner and complimented him for the outstanding work shown by him during his four years in the School of Architecture. The gift consists of a bronze medal issued by the American Institute of Architects, and a volume on Mont. S. Michel and Chartres cathedrals. Seaman has been president of the Architect's club for the past year, and has held office in the Scarab Fraternity.

NEWSPAPERMEN ARRANGE ANNUAL MEETING HERE

Golf Tournament, Banquet And Business Meeting Figure In Tentative Bill

Preliminary arrangements for the visit of Pennsylvania editors and publishers to State College of June twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth were made today by Albert W. Fell of Williamsport, manager of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association, H. K. Hilschman, assistant to the president, and other college officials.

Since the gathering is to be the annual summer outing for editors and publishers of the state, a variety of entertainment and side trips to points of historic interest in this part of the state are to be arranged. The college and the association executives have announced that the gathering will be open to all editors and publishers in the state and interest of all will doubtless be centered in the timely topics for publishers which are to be presented.

A tour of the college property covering two thousand acres, a golf tournament and a newspapermen's banquet will be features on the program that assumed tentative shape today.

Services were held at the Presbyterian church, the eulogy being delivered by Dr. E. W. Runkle, head of the department of Philosophy, who has been a faculty member here for thirty-three years, and by Prof. W. F. Gibbons. Doctor Tudor was graduated from Lafayette college in 1886. He came here in 1894 after studying in Germany and in Johns Hopkins university.

(Continued from first page) delays. In view of our possibilities and delightful environment we should also be able to develop a Commencement week that would bring to us much favorable comment and renown. We can do this by first recognizing the essential elements that must be present in any American college commencement that is worthy of the name, and then by joining together to see that each essential receives its adequate portion of attention and regard.

I need not say that we shall all be somewhat in the public eye during the next several days and will be judged generally, judiciously and manfully according to the impression which we all make on our visitors."

"THE BOOMERANG" TO SHOW TONIGHT

Comedy Centered About Young Doctor—Queer Ailments Provide Humor

N. D. ZIMMERMAN AND MISS TEEPPELL CO-STAR

With tonight set as the first local presentation of "The Boomerang" by the Penn State Players in the Auditorium at eight o'clock, the three act comedy will equal its popularity attained on the road if the early ticket sale is any indication.

Hilarious Plot The opening scene of the play is in the office of Doctor Sumner, a modern physician who has spent eleven years abroad. He is settled in Hatfield with a well equipped office, having all the requisites for success, except patience.

Virginia Kelba, a young girl seeking a position as nurse and office assistant is hired by the Doctor. She is assigned to take care of "Bud" who is the son of Mrs. Wandbridge, a society woman. Dr. Sumner discovers that Bud's ailment is a severe at-

Professor Tudor, Of Faculty, Dies Monday

(Continued from first page) The theory that Dr. Sumner works on is that a modern physician cannot treat anything. In a scene with Virginia that follows he explains his version of love. His treatment of Bud is fairly successful but as is sometimes the case with a boomerang, it often misses its mark and returns to hamper the thrower. Such is the fate of Dr. Sumner. Miss Kelba, a very clever young woman, throws a boomerang herself and brings the play to a happy ending.

The complete cast is as follows: Dr. Gerald Sumner N. D. Zimmerman '25 Marian Sumner Miss M. T. Teeppell '25 Emily H. N. Pennington '25
