A LITTLE SUN ON DADS' DAY

On April twenty-seventh, there appeared in the columns of this paper an article calling attention to a glaring infraction of Penn State courtesy. The keynote of that letter was an appeal for the discontinuing of the practice of charging Penn State Dads for admission to athletic contests on "then day."

The Athletic Association saw fit to disregard this direct criticism at that time, perhaps for reasons which, if made public, would justify the action. However, in the absence of a successful refutation of the facts in the letter, it is not unreasonable that Penn State students should continue to consider the action of the Athletic Association on such occasions as Dads' Day a breach of hospitality.

When alumni return on their day, they expect to be charged admission to athletic events. They are willing to pay admission, because they know that expenses for these contests add up to a considerable sum. Dads, too, are willing, but with Dads, the situation assumes a different aspect. They came to inspect the college to which they have sent their sons and daughters; they come at the request of the College and should be entertained as guests.

On Saturday, Penn State will be host to a large number of Dads. Entertainments have been planned to acquaint them with the hospitality which is Penn State's. To make them part with a single penny for entertainment would cast discredit upon the entire occasion. Unless the Athletic Association can produce some justification for their present policy, it is no more than right that the fathers of us all should be entertained, not assessed.

WALTER CAMP AND PENN STATE

With the reopening of college classrooms throughout the country and the advent of the familiar dull thud of shoe-leather against pigskin on a thousand athletic fields comes the announcement from the Walter Camp Memorial Committee that "Walter Camp Day" is to be celebrated in every section of the country as a signal mark of respect to the memory of the man who did so much to make football the pre-eminent American college game.

Out of deference to the wishes of athletic councils in various sections of the country, no one day has been set aside by the committee for general observance, but each community has been allowed to designate its own date for the memorial. The Thanksgiving Day clash between Pittsburgh and Penn State has been named "Walter Camp Day" for the Panther and the Lion.

The observance of "Walter Camp Day" is a part of the plan whereby the colleges and universities of the entire nation are uniting under the auspices of the National Collegiate Athletic Association with the alumni of Yale university to raise a fund of $300,000 for the erection of a monumental Walter Camp Memorial Gateway as an entrance to the Yale bowl and other athletic fields at New Haven. On either side of the huge gateway will be great bronze panels on which will be cut the names of colleges and universities contributing to the fund. The committee, headed by E. K. Hall, of Dartmouth, chairman of the Football Rules Committee, is bending every effort to have on these panels the name of every institution in America where football is played today, in order that this tribute to the memory of the "Father of American Football" may be truly a national memorial.

There is no doubt that Walter Camp was a cogent force in placing college football in its present position as the greatest American college sport, that the proper place for a memorial dedicated to him is at the entrance to the Yale bowl and that each college and university should contribute toward the Walter Camp Memorial fund. There is no common knowledge of any plans which have been made for Penn State's contribution, but we feel that the Athletic Association will give to that fund an amount of money which will indicate the esteem in which Penn State men hold the memory of Walter Camp, the greatest force in the elevation of college athletics since their inception.

WHAT PRICE GLORY?

Each chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national collegiate journalistic fraternity, is required by the constitution of that fraternity to publish a literary magazine at least once a year. At the annual convention of the organization, mention is made of the publication which is adjudged best by the national officers of the fraternity.

At the convention in California in September, the Penn State representative was called upon to stand and receive congratulations for his entire chapter—the court of Pi Delta Epsilon had placed the Old Main Bell at the top of the list! The Old Main Bell—Penn State's literary magazine—called the best of them all! What price glory?

An honor is truly an honor, no matter upon whom it is bestowed. The Penn State chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon knows that proper appreciation is shown their efforts by their fraternity, but the chapter also would like to see that appreciation manifest in its own college. "A prophet is without glory in his own country."

The Old Main Bell is to be published twice during the present college year. Doubtless Pi Delta Epsilon will again go into debt because of the great lack of student support. But if Penn State students are informed that the Old Main Bell is the best college literary magazine in the country, will they hesitate to buy? Or will they admit their sophomoric tendencies and spend their half-dollars for Whiz-Bang or College Humor? What price glory?

A BROTHER OR A BROTHER?

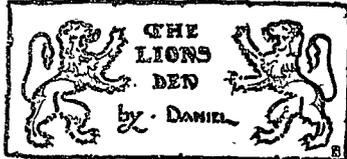

What will become of fraternities when their faculty advisors cease to function? Well, to answer with another question, what is becoming of fraternities now?

What has become of the chapter advisor? Does he ever appear for anything except to have his picture in the La Vie photograph or to stand around with his wife and try to act as a chaperon for the chapter dance?

Is it not the duty of chapter advisors to inspect financial matters of the different departments of their respective organizations? Is it not their duty to supervise all deliberations which tend to become important in the conduct of their chapters? Is it not their function to be truly active brothers? It certainly is.

Why do not these important officers discharge their duty? Some of them do, we grant you, but most of them do not. And why? Ask them. They'll tell you. So will we. It's because they either know or think that the active brothers don't give a hoot for the opinions of men wiser than they inexperienced youths. Often their suspicions are correct, they can be confirmed by a visit to a chapter meeting.

The chapter advisor is not a necessary evil; he is a necessary good. Why not give him a chance and think of him as a big brother instead of a big bother?

A FINANCIER REMEMBERS A CHILDHOOD ACQUAINTANCE

The word Mother!
What a world of love it calls forth
To apall the mind with its worth!
Far beyond the power of another
To obtain or hold
Its valve lies in its rarity.
And the joys it recalls, and the aid
It gives as we face life youthfully unafraid—
These fine qualities multiply its parity
Far beyond mere gold.
Surely I will be paid for my enterprise
If I can find a company to capitalize.
Which on Mother's things will specialize.
There will be Mammy songs and lullabies,
Mother's flapjacks, cakes and pies,
Many more of "Mother's" makings I'll devise
And have good men their manufacture vaporize.

Grid Gossip

Not since the day of Jules Provost has the local grid seen placements kicked the way Piersol, visiting end, booted them before game-time. They rode far and handsome, drawing gasps from the crowd.

Hal Hastings was irritated by one of the officials. In the shower room Hal remarked, "I called him (naughty names) but he didn't seem to hear me." He went on to tell specifically just what he had remarked about the arbitrator's ancestors when Cy interrupted him with "He hears you now!"

The stalwart guard wheeled in time to catch a glimpse of the official's pink and white loveliness retreating through the door, a grim smile on his face and a nasty glitter in his eye.

It doesn't seem at all queer to us that the varsity's goal line is as yet uncrossed when we glance at Mahoney, Hastings, Kiall, Greenshields and Monz. This quintet has warded off danger in every game and practice session thus far this season.

Police had to form a cordon to protect some valiant youth from assorted pellets hurled at him by enraged Penn students at Franklin Field Saturday. The gentleman in question appeared in a pink fedora, but it so aroused the ire of the cash customers that he disappeared in great haste.

Notre Dame opened its season with a rush of several hundreds of yards. The South Bend juggernaut conquered Beloit to the tune of 77-0, using three full teams.

Greasy Neal, captain and quarterback of last year's yearling eleven, distinguished the fair name of Neal by a single-handed advance of seventy yards in ten plays for one of the two touchdowns registered against Dickinson by Western Maryland.

The Marylanders are coached by Dick Hallow, former Penn State mentor and later Colgate chief. Thus far they have registered victories over Gettysburg and Dickinson.

It looks suspiciously as if the Bellefonte Academy gridgers enjoy rivalry with Penn State. No less than nine former County Seat football luminaries are enrolled on the Pitt squad.

This is one we forgot to record last Tuesday. A Susquehanna athlete costed Leo Houck and Larry Conover in the lobby of Varsity Hall. It was the night before the game, and both of the coaches were puffing contentedly on black cheroots. The visitor gasped his surprise, remarking enviously, "You boys sure lead a life of ease. How many of those are you allowed a week?" Leo contemplated an empty purse and countered sadly,
