found a hole at center and galloped to the Onange forty-four yard line. The New Yorkers braced and Pin kicked out of bounds on the eighteen yard line. Dangerfield snared an alien pass before the visitors could launch their offensive and returned to the Orange thrity-seven yard stripe. A penalty and an incomplete pass compelled Faulkner to drop buck to punt. His boot was grounded by Lesko on the two-yard line. Bayley, summoned to punt out of danger, was usshed, and kicked out of bounds on the thrity yard mark Pritchard and Hamas could not gain the necessary yardage, and Bill's placement fell short of the uprights. This matked the high-tide of the Nittany attack. With Bathott and Flanagan alter-

A five-yand penalty hampered the Orange cause. Krall and Hastings stopped Eurobut on two consecutive guand plays but Big Ray skirted tackle for a touchdown Cooke scored the extra point by placement

Orange Demed in Third Quarter Clarke receled off the most brilliant individual bit of the afternoon by twisting his way twenty-seven yands to the Luon forty-five yaid mark late in the second period. No less than seven Nittany players laid hands upon him, but he shook them off one by one until pulled to earth by Greenshields.

Not once did the pigskin rest in Syracius territory during the thind period, yet when hard piessed the Lions rose and halted the Orange tide. Lee blocked a Faulkner puln and Archoska recovered, but even the great Barbut; could not shatted the Nittany wall.

In a last desperate attempt to score Lungen tossed two successful passes to Hamas, which, coupled with a fifteen yaid penalty againt. Syracuse, carried the ball past midfield. However, Captain Hamson and his mates were soon knocking at the Lion goal again when Levy intercepted an aerial.

Barbuti failed to crack the Lion line and dashed around left end to place the piskskin in position for Cooke's ensuing placement Hamas ran the kick-off back to midfield as the game ended Dinget Dangeifield, diminutive halfack, thrice are red possible scores by batting down Syracuse aerials at critical moments. Hamas's defensive work likewise was above reproach Lesko, Faulkner and Delp showed increased knowledge at the wing posts ord the entire forward wall looked nuch better than against Notie Dane last Saturday Mahoney was guilty of several bad passes but was effective on the defense.

Both elevens were erippiled materially. Syracuse played without Gotch "Whippet" Cari, one of the greatest halfbacks in the East, as well as Friedman, Goldman and Baysinger, all regulars Penn State missed Captain Ken Weston and Slamp, ends, and Koopke, halfback.

The game was not marred by numcreus penalties, although it was a looth and nail struggle from the very sutset. Syracuse clearly demonstrated its superiority on the offense and for the fourth time in as many years,

Kiski talled cloven first downs as against three for the yearlings. Many substitutions were made the second half, Kishi calling upon several third-string men

The time was 25 minutes 31 3-5 seconds, a new course record. The former record was 26 minutes 20 seconds, set by Barclay last year. Both Loucks and Proudlock agreed after the meet that it was the toughest race they had ever run in their lives. Despite his troublesome nose Loucks put up a good fight. Although the sod of the golf course was shightly shippery, the brisk morning air was favorable for cross-country running.

Reis and Fouracre stepped out at the beginning of the second lap, while Cox gained a ten yaid lead over Loucks On the downhill stretch Cox set a terrific pace, striding beautifully. Jenkins crept up to within ten yards of Loucks, while the others maintained their respective positions. Loucks' nose appeared to be bothering him.

At the half-way mark during the second lap, Cox had earned a hundred-yard advantage over Loucks, while Offenhauser was the same distance behind Loucks. Fouracre was running fourth. Cox had stretched his lead to 160 yards as they came up the hill to make the second turn around the links and seemed to be in splendid shape. The strain was telling on Loucks who was a bit shaky on the up-grade. He recovered on the level and continued.

Offenhauser had cut Loucks' lead to fifty yards while Reis trailed him by twenty and Fouracie, forty Proudlock was in fifth place On the hill nearing the track, Jenkins, in sixth place, collapsed and had to bearried from the course. Stewatt, Goldberg, Guyen and Cohen, followed in order.

Cox increased his lead on the track, and on the curve tuined his head to see Loucks just entering.
