"ALL FRESHMEN OUT"

Every year cach College extra-curricular activity summons, candidates for the various managerial and other executive positions. Every year a number that approaches the half-hundred mark responds to the respective calls. Two years later the most gifted and worthy candidate finds himself elevated to the position to which he once aspired while he was but one of the original half-hundred.

Dirgum the care and the content of th

pired while he was but one of the original halthundied.

During the same period, a limited group are doomed to disappointment. They are of the host that tried and failed. Even though an individual "lost out" he gained invaluable assets—experience and friends. These lead to greater assets—experience to personality and friends to happiness. A college education is never contained solely in books. The student who puts in night afteringht extracting knowledge from educational tomes gets just what he seeks—knowledge. The student who combines "cracking the books" with extra-curricular activity becomes learned and at the same time develops a personality. Of the two—the most important is personality, intangible but positive in its effects.

Toright the COLLEGIAN issues a call for freshmer candidates for the business staff. To each freshman who answers will come an opportunity for practical experience in modern business methods, following a preliminary six weeks' training course.

Previous experience is not necessary. Willingness to learn is the sole qualification. Men well-versed in the three departments of the business end of this paper will give weekly courses pertaining, to work that will be required of the candidates. At the conclusion of the course the new espirants will assume the regular duties of fieshmen business men.

At the end of the freshman year, the apprentice period, the candidates will encounter, with their sophomore status, more specialized work. Late in their sophomore year, four outstanding candidates will advance to the role of assistant business manager: an advertising manager, a circulation manager and an assistant-circulation manager will be chosen.

Mer in the business world are unanimous in ager and an assistant-circulation manager will be chosen.

Mer in the business world are unanimous in the declaration that experience and personality are the biggest factors in success. Both are the reward for hard and constant endeaver. Experience and personality are waiting for the ambitious oner who venture into the field of extra-curricular activity while undergraduates in college.

Opportunity, so it is said, knocks but once. Opportunity will knock within the hearing distance of many freshmen tought. This opportunity is a golden one. Like all other opportunity it, too, knocks but once.

CAN WE CLAIM CULTURE?

The saying goes that Dame Fortune has hair only on the anterion portion of her head, the posterior section being bald. Which is just a roundabout way of saying that tomorrow Penn State students have an opportunity to hear one of the world's most famous musicians and anyone neglecting to avail himself of the opportunity is wasting a wonderfully brilliant smile from Dame Fortune glecting to avail himself of the opportunity is wasting a wonderfully brilliant smile from Dame Fortune

Eircm Zimbalist, whose mellow notes have charmed peoples all over the world, at Penn State! What an opportunity! Are we going to take advantage of it? Will we lend ourselves to that magic spell which the true musician alone can weave, or will those enchanting melodies beat themselves upon row after row of empty seats? Penr State's cultural pulse will be tested tomoriow. Will it this strong and full, or will it show that our College education is failing in one of its most fundamental objectives—the instilling of that intangible something which recognizes and appreciates art and the genius?

The Artists' Entertainment Course has not received the support this year which its ment deserves. The program is exceptional, it includes only the best, the worth while. What could be more deserving of the student body's unqualified backing? College students, trained to appreciate the ability of others, should need no urging to attend such entertainment as the one tomorrow will afford.

The turnout at the first recital of the Winter Concert Course Sunday proved that Penn State students can appreciate things of cultural value. The audience was sympathetic and appreciative, calling forth the best from its entertainers. Why cannot such support be accorded visiting artists? Tomorrow night we will learn conclusively whether or not Penn State students know the best when it is oftered them. Shall we view the shining portion of Dame Fortune's pade knowing that a great opportunity has been lost, or shall we take advantage of this immense occasion? Penn State your cultural training challenges you!

"FOR REFERENCE USE ONLY"

We read in the Daily Cardinal of the University of Wisconsin that a man has been expelled from college for taking a reserve book from the reading room of the library. Through this some of our own sellish students who insist on borrowing reserve books should see the serious nature of their offense.

r onense. The judgment meted out by the Univer-The judgment meted out by the University of Wisconsin authorities for the infraction of this "for reference use only" rule is not unjustifyable. Recognition of other people's rights and property is essential to a college trained man and the lesson taught by this case of expulsion should impress niself upon each individual. We hope that no similar action will be necessary at Penn State but a precedent has been set.

The Bullosopher's Chair

SESSION ONE
Smithers—Well Bullosopher, the usual pow-wow over the delay of re-exams to next fall is on. The minus-one aggregation seems to be taking it harder than ever. Numerous complaints have been wafted through the air to my uncettoned ears.

gregators seems to be taking it induct interest with more recouse complaints have been wafted through the air to my uncotioned ears.

Billosopher—Yes Smithers, what you's ye is quite true. The minus-ore Johnnies ean't seem to see the object in nathing off the Enals to net fall. It hardly does seem fan to make those unfortunate students, I use the term with some apprehension, what seven months to prove their highly to inability of inability of Ther again the practical side must be considered. The amplication arising out of the scheduling of re-exams at time true of the evar handicap the registrar's office in the Juffilment of its regular duties. All things considered, Smithers, I don't that that the "almost passed" students have must to complain about. A little foresight usually belps c lot.

SESSION TWO

Smithers—Do you know, Bullosopher, that after last Saturdey I am almost tempted to believe in signs? Those blue pamphlets i-sued by the Student Council seemed to Livit, results Bulla-opher—Yes, I was thinking of that just the other lay Judging from the way students observe the "Please" igns placed upor certain parts of the camping. I was prepared to see that carefully compiled list of "Don'ts" grossity distegarded. But, as you say, there was a noticeable improvement in the general conduct of the audience. Perhaps the appeal to an almost dormant gentlemality spirit, attacked that sense of self resiges that action. Jeet us hope, Smithers, that something will happen to obliterate our Cow Petes from the Campus also.
