

GRANGES SWELL FUND FOR DORMITORY HERE

Purposing to swell the total receipts for the Grange memorial dormitory to be erected on the Penn State campus, three Centre county Granges have organized a dramatic league with the intention of presenting three plays in the Auditorium. One of these plays has already been given.

Logan Grange, Pleasant Gap, staged the first offering entitled "The Road to the City" on March twenty-fourth. "Polly at Sunshinette Cottage" will be given by the dramatists of Halfmoon Grange of Stormtown, Pa., in the Auditorium tonight at eight-fifteen. Penn State Grange's production "Poor Father" will have a preliminary showing at Stormtown, Friday, April first.

Shortly after Easter, a silver loving cup, donated by Centre County Pomona Grange, will be awarded to the players presenting the best play.

Architects Forsake Usual Haunts for Fun and Frolic at Annual Beaux Arts Ball

Many are the nights the Architects have toiled, working on their problems with their smocks bespotted. But Friday night they cast away their pencils, rules and all, to revel at their costume fete, the yearly Beaux Arts Ball.

The came not in their Hardin Halls but in their clever costumes escorting ladies gay and fair with scents of faint perfumes. And as upon the floor they glide, who greets them but a Sepoy guide; from India far-off he came yet knew each visitor by name. Upon each guest he set his glance, inviting them, each once, to dance.

To music sweet away they danced, by artful settings o'er entranced. Dim lights behind the evergreen gave to the floor a silvery sheen. Some pretty whirls the gleeful couples tried and then into another room did glide, where lo! a myriad of colors they beheld, all pouring forth like countless rainbows yet untold.

Unaware of judges were the happy pairs whose costumes met the sterna committees' share. When intermission comes the judges say which couples' costume is to them most gay. Miss Berry and John Howe, with costumes dandy, received the critics' prize, a box of candy. Miss Holbrook and B. Grimm, bedecked with cards, were honored for their garb with due awards.

With ample streamers strewn like fallen flowers, the students revelled until the early hours.

Although Scranton Central High amassed an early lead, the Windier aggregation cut it down and finally won out 35-25, after which Steelton took Westfield into camp to the tune of 48-32.

Despite the five field goals rung up by Haldeman in the second half, Sharon experienced little difficulty in reaching the semi-finals with a win over Summit Hill.

New Castle, however, forced Sharon
