THE GRANGE

One of the most congenial tasks a newspaper editor has to do is to extend commendation where commendation is due. And it is our pleasure to offer congratulations to the Penn State Grange...

So infrequently is it that a Penn State society does something for Penn State that the effect of accomplishment is somewhat astounding.

The Bullosopher's Chair

Smithers—Bullosopher, be frank with me. What did you think of the "span show"?

Smithers—But you can't say that and get away with it. You must praise our diamonds or be called to time. You know old chap, that the so-called "freedom" is a mere figure of speech—in a college town.

Smithers—"But I have heard many folks say that 'Gul Wanted' was a much better show than last year's 'The Kid Himself'."

Smithers—"Well, what did you think of the individual performances? Are they worth a few lines?"

Wall Sealing Will Be Included in R. O. T. C. Field Day's Program

Wall sealing will probably take the place of tent pitching in the list of events for the R. O. T. C. Field Day, to be held May twenty-seventh on New Beaver field, Lieutenant Colonel General McLaughlin, head of the Penn State Military department, announced today.

The complete program, as affixed by College authorities, will remain the same as in previous years with the possible exception of a wall sealing competition being substituted in place of the tent pitching contest. These will also be company competitive drill, manual of arms contest, rescue race, and the ever-popular shoe race.

Prizes will remain the same as those offered in recent years, the company winning the drilling being awarded a silver loving cup, the first place being carried the rest of the year and the second and third awards will also be given.

A gold medal will be presented to the winner of the manual of arms competition by President Hetzel. Second and third awards will also be given. Prizes for the winners of the other events will be given by members of the town and will consist of articles of clothing and athletic equipment.

From the School of Liberal Arts, J. C. Belfield, John Ferguson, C. F. Plinn, K. G. James, H. B. Henderson, W. L. Hoffman, J. G. Lindsey, W. H. Roschberg, Joseph Schaefer, A. K. Schroeder.

Colorful Tradition to Feature Move-up Day

Monday evening will see a continuation of class tradition. The seniors will congregate on the front campus at six-thirty to participate in the first of the College sings. Preceding the musical proceedings the Ivy Day ceremonies will be held, the graduating class planting Virginia creeper about the walls of Old Main.

On the night of the concluding sing, Pies den Hotel will deliver a short talk after several selections by the Glee club.

Student Council Rulings. In connection with Move-up Day, the Student Council wishes freshmen and sophomores to interpret the decree correctly. Freshmen must wear dinks to the Holmes field carnival and carry another headpiece in reserve. The first-year men must also abide by freshmen fraternity house rulings and regulations, although assuming junior regulations must obey the interfraternity council rulings regarding visiting other houses during dances.

The Council announces that it will deal severely with non-observers of these decrees.

ANNOUNCE EXAMINATION FOR POSITIONS IN ARMY

BASSO PROFUNDO

The very obvious defect of all chapel speakers who address and advise Penn State students weekly, with more or less effusiveness, is their predilection to abandon the real and to sink into the abstract where neither reason nor folly can reach them. It would seem to the skeptical that they are suspiciously wary. But to the ordinary undergraduate it appears that the chapel speakers avoid the concrete simply as a means toward saving their oracular dignity; to him the map on the ostrum is above not only the audience but intellectual betrayal. And so, appreciating the predicament of a fellow confronted with the difficulty of his profession, the average undergraduate—and he is an optimist—learns to contend against monotony with acceptable deportment, and even to laugh appropriately when the speaker, to illustrate his daring, denounces "Elmer Gantry" with a great deal of fine and virtue, but never, alas, with intrigue.

To Dr. H. W. A. Hanson's credit he did not flinch to enter into real argument Sunday. Without a doubt Doctor Hanson, who is president of Gettysburg college, was the most excellent chapel speaker we have had the pleasure to listen to this year. Doctor Hanson's sermon was inspiring, his message illuminating, his logic impressive, even resounding. Indeed, he can be challenged on a single point alone. Doctor Hanson made the lamentable error of building upon a false premise, assuming, in his discourse, that at least nine out of ten people—to judge from the thunder of his oratory—are rebelling unreasonably on the silly theory of "expressing themselves." The tenth man, Doctor Hanson intimated sadly, was afflicted with materialism.

The fact of the matter is that with the "Menckel cotene," as Doctor Hanson styled them, most people have very little sympathy; and that in lashing this cotene, with his well-modulated voice, the Gettysburg president belabored no one's back but his own. For Doctor Hanson, in decrying the "superficialities and frivolities of life," stressed as a cure, idealism. And in pleading that the country's youth, college men in particular, think about spiritual things occasionally he demanded imagination, a quality apparently with which few chapel speakers are endowed. Doctor Hanson, one is sorry to admit, used reason where reason was best, and shortsightedness where vision was required. His conclusion was this: young men may have their doubts, indeed they should have them, but if these doubts do not result in the ordained way the young men are more or less damned. This is very picturesque.

ELMER GANTRY !!!

Probably the greatest sensation since the Armistice has not been Mae West's padlocked drama "Sex," as Mae West has covily alleged, but Sinclair Lewis' comedy, "Elmer Gantry." Clergymen, the United States over, place both on a par, thus revealing in their own limitations an artistly, the infinite capacity of man to make an ass of himself. Many of them, we are afraid, have come perilously close to the ridiculous in their attempts to pose as critics. Their critical faculties do not excel the actual; in the realm of the imaginative they are lost.

Many clergymen appraise the book as a matter of self defense; John Roach Stratton advertises it—and fills his church. None are capable of fair-minded judgment; for, fearful that they themselves may be mistaken for Elmer they overlook the fact that they have neither the physique nor the tendency to emulate Lewis' notorious protagonist. Quite dramatically they proceed, with a great show of indignation and well-rounded stock phrases, from mere anger to glowing denunciation, and from glowing denunciation to articulate brawling. All this, of course, passes off as substitute for profundity; and this is very sad. Yet we are not so cynical as to think that most preachers actually believe—in private, that is—that Lewis would destroy all physicians and clergymen to purge the world. "Elmer Gantry" sears the preachers. Therefore it is not good art.

But what is most amusing is the announcement that Sinclair Lewis has written "Elmer Gantry" to make money. Penn State professors have declared so, bitterly. Therefore the book is poor art. But sh-h-h. Even the professors have been known to write books to make money.
