A LOST ART

Of all the lost arts the one which seems to be most lost on the campus is the art of being on time.

Things have come to the place where a hostess, if she wants her guests to come at eight o'clock, asks them for seven and knows that perhaps they will be assembled by nine.

If a meeting is scheduled to begin at seven-thirty, the chairman thereof can rest assured that the members may begin to arrive by eight o'clock.

If a girl tells a young man she will be ready to go out at eight o'clock, he knows that he can arrive at eight-fifteen or thirty and still have plenty of time to settle the problems of the universe with the other superhumanly patient young men who are also holding down the davenport and other furniture in the various dormitory lobbies.

It is most annoying and discourteous to the presiding officer of Friday mass meetings to have the girls come strolling in five or ten minutes late.

These are but a few examples of the many cases when the girls are not on time. We admit that the men are sometimes late, too, but that is not our present concern. What we wish to say is that it is not, as many suppose, "stylish" to be late, but really shows selfish lack of good breeding unless it is absolutely unavoidable, as it may be in one case out of perhaps fifty.

It has been brought to our attention that several people objected to our recent editorial on "Poor Losers" on the grounds that it showed partiality, and was aimed at the recent election results. This was not our intention. The only connection between the editorial and elections is the fact that it happened to be published in an issue soon after the elections. We wish to assure everyone that when we wrote it we had no particular person in mind. Such an action would be decidedly foreign to the policy of the Women's column, which tries to be entirely fair and unprejudiced.

Girls Don Lioness Suits Move-up Day

Lionesses as well as lions will be seen about the campus on Move-up Day. The class of 1927, having a reputation for doing things differently, will establish a precedent on this occasion.

Discarding the traditional cases the Senior girls will don lion suits except for the overalls. Just to be different the blue lion will be on the pocket of the lioness coats instead of the back as on the lion suits.

Will Issue 1928 La Vie On Eighteenth of May

President R. D. Hetzel, accompanied by their pictures. An administration division is also included wherein a page is devoted to each school containing a group picture of the department heads, a picture of the dean and a letter by him. An article by Dr. E. W. Runkle, college historian, on the growth of Penn State also appears in this section.

The individual class pictures are arranged in groups of seven at the top of each page with the names and other data following in list form on the lower half of the page. A theme showing the Liberal Arts building and the Auditorium is worked in on each of these pages.

Action Pictures

Under the activities section a slight departure from custom was made in that many of the athletic pictures are of the action variety. Each major sport is introduced by a page devoted to its captain and the editor-in-chief and business manager of each publication at Penn State are given individual pictures which are followed by group pictures of the staffs. A division is also devoted to events, but it appears in the form of three pages of photographs instead of the usual editorial.

Rohrbeck Returns to Duties Following Trip

After an absence of four weeks, during which he served as state agent on the Corn-borer Information Service, Mr. E. H. Rohrbeck, instructor in agricultural extension, has returned to his duties here.

Mr. Rohrbeck was chosen to accompany Messrs. Reuben Bingham and G. W. Ackerman, of the government extension service at Washington. His duties consisted of outlining publicity and news service for county agents and collecting material for state investigation relative to the disposal of corn stubble in fields, in an effort to check the growing corn-borer menace.

According to Mr. Rohrbeck, the work is being done under provision of a recent act of Congress which appropriated ten million dollars for the purpose of checking the spread of the corn borer. This insect has become a real menace to the five-billion-dollar crop of the United States and clean-up work is now being conducted in five states.
