

FROTH SCHEDULED FOR BROADCASTING

Humorous Magazine to Transmit Over WPSG Tomorrow For First Program

PENN STATE PLAYERS ENACT TWO COMEDIES

As an innovation to the ordinary program of broadcasting, the College radio station WPSG will transmit an evening of college humor and entertainment by members of the Penn State Froth board tomorrow night at eight o'clock.

The Penn State Players provided the program last night from the radio station and enticed for the invisible audience two one act plays, "Sweet and Twenty," and "A Marriage Has Been Arranged."

Although broadcasting of jokes, humorous stories and other contributions of Penn State's Frothy has never been tied before, the members of the staff fully expect a successful evening. Excerpts from recent issues and a few articles which will appear in the forthcoming House Party number are to be given by the foolish gentlemen.

No definite program has been announced for the broadcasting tomorrow night and the humor will be largely extemporaneous with a few musical selections by Chang Smith interspersed.

Players Entertain Aided by their orchestra, the Penn State Players presented to a short one act play over the radio last night under the direction of Prof. A. C. Cloening. J. Wheatley '29, recently elected president of the organization, took the leading part in "A Marriage Has Been Arranged."

The Players' orchestra, under the direction of Mr. H. A. Wahl, gave a number of selections during the program and Mrs. Cloening sang several solos. Miss Madelyn Wright was scheduled for a number of readings and the entire program was one of the best presented this year from the College radio station, according to listeners-in.

Farm and garden talks followed the regular program as a number in the weekly set of advices given by members of the College agricultural staff for the benefit of farmer listeners-in of the nearby country.

Favorable reports of broadcast reception of WPSG have been received from Pittsburgh, Altoona, points in West Virginia, the New England States and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Front Campus Cemetery Proves Love Of College Students for Professors

It's out! And it's not the movie, not even that indefinable something in other words the problem that confronts the College is the annual cemetery group which reposed Sunday on the front of the front campus. It is the All-American selection of that mysterious group of students which annually voices public disapproval of methods pursued in the classroom by various members of the faculty.

From chemical reactions to plain Fifth Avenue "dot" the eminent professors were labelled. Titles were numerous, some applicable, some not so potent and others far from being fit for the younger generation to witness.

Impossible ingredients were brought forth and general hints or suggestions were forthcoming regarding many of the members. Twenty-two were selected from the group of more than

With R. D. Dundure '27, officiating at the Y. M. C. A. banquet, Tuesday night in Valety Hall, the following officers for the coming year were installed: L. L. Gwin '28, president, H. L. Kinsel '28, vice president, A. J. Gares '29, second vice president, L. W. Barton '29, secretary, and W. S. Siebert '29, treasurer.

To be able to assume responsibility to see and see clearly, and to evaluate properly the material things of life are essentially the results of a higher education according to President R. D. Hetzel, who spoke at the dinner following President Hetzel, W. E. Kroll '17, national council secretary of the Middle Atlantic district of the Y. M. C. A., spoke of the ideals of the Christian association. "The reason that we do not succeed," he said, "is because we lack knowledge of the man whose name we bear. The more we know Jesus, the more we become convinced that there is some Supreme Being."

During the early part of the meeting the presiding officer, S. L. Reeder '27, introduced Carl Calhoun, fire-nation secretary of the "Y." Dean R. L. Watts of the School of Agriculture, and W. J. Kitchen, secretary of the "Y," each of whom gave short talks.

Shades of Co-op Corner at Two A. M. Present Sinister Lure to Wanderer

Dong! Dong! Dong!—the clock strikes twelve. The mystic hour is upon the streets of State College. Hardly has the echo of the clock died out before half the lights on the sidewalk fade away as if in despair.

An hour passes and few changes are noted. Shadows are long and deep and only the subdued purring whirr of the College dynamo keeps the casual visitor from believing that he has at last reached the city of the dead.

Now and anon a car dashes from an alley and disappears into the darkness of the night, its small red tail-light being the last to be absorbed by the blackness. A student wanders by, aimlessly stammering home from the Club Diner. There always is light. Any hour finds someone around to keep the den of "thaw one" in operation.

Soon the campus police detachment on night duty wanders past the confines of the College property for a moment's chat and then the silence becomes truly oppressive. A glance around shows that the windows of the Corner Room display fruit salad, a ginger ale and catsup. The Athletic Store shows any interfraternity spot scheduled that is timely. Up Allen street lights shine intermittently. College avenue presents a like display. A glance at the campus discloses nothing in particular. But yet—there is a certain quiet contentment on Co-op corner at two o'clock Sunday night.
