PRESIDENT HETZEL SPEAKS

Last Friday afternoon President Hetzel spoke at the girls' mass meeting. In the course of the talk he stated that he was very surprised to find that when he called for a meeting of the Juniors and Seniors only men responded.

He went on to say that he had no idea that the plans of the men and women at the college were run on such entirely separate plans, and that he thought that the women were left out entirely too much.

President Hetzel was right in a certain degree. There should be more co-operation between the men and women here on the campus. After all, we're all going to the same college, and are interested in many of the same things.

However, it does not seem as if it would be practicable to have the men and women under the same student government body. There are so many problems that the one has that are of no interest at all to the other.

Let us, as the president suggests, try to co-operate, but let us be careful that we don't try to do something that will make a worse state of affairs than we have now. Let's not give up our present system until we are sure we have a better one which will work in theory as well as in practice.

The amount collected by this assessment is being divided among
