CLASS MEETINGS

What is a class meeting? Since actions speak louder than words, most of the people around here reply, "Something to stay away from."

When the notice of a class meeting is posted, most girls immediately think of something "more important" that must be done at the time of the meeting, and then only. It could not possibly wait for an hour or so.

So many consider Penn State spirit in the same light as they do their religion—something to be used on occasion. But just as religion is more than going to church, so Penn State spirit is something more than yelling yourself hoarse at a football game.

It is something which makes you give anything connected with Penn State your heartiest support in any and all possible ways. Where class meetings are concerned, a loyal Penn Stater will be there and will enter into the business of the meeting just being there helps some, but to display true Penn State spirit some interest must be shown.

Of course there are some cases where it is really impossible to get to the meetings, but it is a noticeable thing that the same people are always absent.

We all have our failings, but failing to attend class meetings seems to be chronic with the majority. It is not too late to mend our ways. Let's surprise everyone by starting to attend class meetings this very next time, and let's keep it up.

Detroit Conference Will Include State Students

At the girls mass meeting on Tuesday Mrs. W. J. Kitchen presented to the girls their invitation to the tenth Student Volunteer Conference to be held this year at Detroit from December 28 to January 2.

The conference is held every student generation and its theme is International Christian relations with an emphasis on other countries' reactions to Christianity.

Approximately six thousand students representing eight hundred colleges are present at the conference, and speakers and leaders come from all over the world.

The Penn State allotment of delegates for this year is twenty-three, and from four to eight of these will be girls. A local committee will select the delegates, taking into consideration their interest and ability.

CO-EDS TO BEGIN RIFLE PRACTICE

Lieutenant Miller announces that rifle practice for girls will begin immediately after Thanksgiving. Girls who are interested in the sport have been given a chance to sign up, and approximately thirty-five girls have responded. A fifty cent fee is being charged.

Gridmen Hold Intense Drill For Pitt Game

was again the keynote of the session as two backfields and two sets of ends alternately sped through swift aerial maneuvers.

With Cy Lungren and Allic Wolf absent, the desirable results have not been procured. Piney and Danzigfeld are being groomed for the regular quarterback's post while Whitmore, Miller, C. Craig and Stubble have been filling Wolf's vacancy. Both regulars will return and see service in the Pitt fray. Lungren's foot injury revealed no broken bones while Wolf's mishap proved only a leg laceration that has been treated successfully in Bellefonte. Lungren visited a Philadelphia specialist.

There is no beauty in the face that strains to see. The wrinkles will tell after all.

To look "beautifully"—and to look "beautiful"—you must consult an eye specialist who is truly competent.
