before the College Senate for a final vote Monday morning

The Christmas vacation slice and the granting of a respite of one week to the period between semicisters is the one proposed change that has caused the loudest squalking from the student body. And that clamoring has been justified. There are many students who use the week or more before Santa comes, to add to a bank roll that receives its greatest test at that period. Now if they were forced to remain in College until one or two days before Christmas Day, they would be the losers of the twenty, thrty, forty or more dollars that they could be earning during the "rush" period. Again, it is during the sixteen days of the Christmas vacation that the student is enabled to renew friendships with the companions that he knew during high school days. The Christmas period affords his first fredi "break" after the opening of College in September, it enables the student a rest before the apparently useless but important finals. Christmas vacation is the same length of sixteen days at practically every college in the country, and there is no reason why Penn State should alter that portion of its calendar.

A vacation period of one week between semestern and the semester of the college of the college of the country and there is no reason why Penn State should alter that portion of its calendar.

country, and there is no reason why Penn State should alter that portion of its calendar

A vacation period of one week between semesters appears decidedly useless to all except the College Administration. The one week would enable the first semester grades to be formulated before the second registration starts, thus eliminating a lot of unnecessary dropping and adding of courses. But what about the students? They could make a trip to their homes, at considerable expense, but many of their friends would be away at other colleges which would then be in session. No, the student body would not welcome a vacation at this period.

Everyone will agree that it is easier to pick a thing to pieces than it is to construct. In fact, all humans seem to take especial delight at doing that very thing, that condition will always exist as long as the world keeps revolving. We appreciate the efforts that someone unbended to keep pace with the progressive policy of the College. The majority of the changes were sadly needed, especially the postponing of the opening of College until later in September and the abolition of the present Thanksgiving recess.

The Christmes accetion slore and the between

The Christmas vacation slice and the between semester vacation will not meet with even the favor of a minority of the student body. And, after all, the students should receive some consideration.

A DOZEN OF ONE AND TWELVE OF THE OTHER

A DOZEN OF ONE AND TWEETE OF THE OTHER
No one would ever be forced to take the short end of the bargain if he were to trade ten dimes to his neighbor for four quarters, providing of course, that meither of the participants were counterfeiters.
All of which leads us closer to the point of our yarn On the behalf of the student body a petition has been prepared, which will be presented to the College Senate on Monday morning, asking for a half-day increase in the date of the ending of the Christmas vacation for the holiday to end on Tuesday, January 3, 1928 at moon instead of Tuesday, January 3, 1928 at eight o'clock as it now stands. The students want to receive ten dimes

In order that the petition will carry more possibility of meeting with the favor of the "jury," theid is a clause stating that the student body would be willing for the acation to start on Saturday, December 17, 1927 at noon instead of Friday, December 16, 1927 at five o'clock as it new stands are willing to give the four quarters.

January 28, 1928, at 11 50 a. m. Evaminations will take place from January 30 to February 4, inclusive
Any student having two evaminations scheduled at the same time of any student having three examinations scheduled on the same day, is 16quired to report the fact in person at the Office of the Registral on the special form provided there. To receive adjustments, such conflicts must be 10ported not later than five o'clock on Friday, December 16, 1927.

Notices, of adjustments will be available to students at the Office of are willing to give the jour quarters.

The inaccessibility of State College to the home towns of the majority of the student-body at Penn State, is the main reason for the agitation. Were vacations so scheduled as to start and end at noon, practically a full day would be saved for the students. The latter would then be enabled to make the trip back to College on the same day, rather than to be forced to travel the day before, in order to arrive in time for early morning classes. The fact that New Years Day will be celebrated on the second day of the month, the same day that students will be forced to return under the present schedule, is by far the most important reason.

The wishes and hopes of the entire student body,

Important reason

The wishes and hopes of the entire student body, or at least of the vast majority, will be behind the petition for the two-way change in the Christmas vacation schedule. It is merely the receiving of ten dimes for four quarters. No one will be the recipient of the short end of that bargain

The Bullosopher's Chair

"Hone may forecast, judging by the presentation of "The Family Upstairs," by he Penn State Players in the Auditorium last Wednesday evening, State College audierces may expect a good season in college drainaties. "The play itself is one well suited for amateur preduction and is full of humor, wit and sature. It depicts a bit of present day, middle class family life with its affictions, its shickerings, ambitions, it is ind pretense, in such a relistic way that the audience is kept laughing appreciatively throughest the price, and saying "Hasen't you seen 'en just like that". (The Hell-ei family! How appropriately named!)

THE LITTLE GIRL WITH THE CURL

To say that the proposed revolution in the College calendar for 1928-29 is causing a ripple of comment over the sea of campus opinion would be putting it mildly indeed. Those fortunate persons who have learned of the idea are quite stirred up about it. Where a calm sea held sway before the proposed calendar alterations leaked out, the scenery has changed to a tempestuous body of water with mountainous waves ind innumerable white caps.

Of course, anything that is radical is bound to evoke opposition. That was true even before Washington decided to embark for the voyage across the Delaware. The proposed new talendar is no exception. But just as was the case with the "little grif with the curl right in the middle of her forehead" with the curl right in the middle of her forehead there are many good points to the new calendar that are very, very good but there are one of two other changes that are "horrid". It is to be hoped that the latter will be stricken out before the proposition goes before the College Senate for a final vote Monday morning.

The Chistmas vacation slice and the granting of a respite of one week to the period between semesters is the one proposed change that has caused the leader excellings from the student by And that leads a surface of the players, and much of the humor of the latter will be stricken out before the proposition goes before the College Senate for a final vote Monday morning.
