THE CONTEST

By the time this goes to press the contest will already be on. What contest? Why that between the Town and Campus girls to see which will have one-hundred per cent contributors to the Grange dormitory fund first.

Any time until Saturday morning, January 21, you may be approached by one of the canvassers and asked to contribute twenty-five cents or as much more as you can afford. Don't refuse.

Campus girls, don't refuse on the grounds that you haven't the quarter or that you will derive no benefits from the new building. Stay home from a movie or forego a sandwich or a sundae. And even if you will not be benefited, those in the near future will. Some of the girls now in the lower classes will probably have a chance to draw rooms in the new Grange Memorial dorm. What if the members of the Grange had refused to contribute on the grounds that they would never have a chance to live in the building!

Town Girls, the same thing applies to you. Perhaps you do not like living in town. A contribution to the fund is just that much help towards the goal to have every girl on the campus.

Then there is of course the incentive of having your side win, whether you live in town or on campus. Don't let it be said that you were the one who prevented your side from attaining the hundred per cent mark first.

Watch the chart on Dean Ray's bulletin board, and do all you can to help your side.

NEW MEMBERS INITIATED BY LOUISE HOMER CLUB

The Louise Homer Club held its meeting at the home of Mrs. R. W. Grant on West Fairmount avenue on Tuesday evening.

Catherine MacLean '28 was initiated into active membership and Olive Osterhout '29 to associate membership.

The program included vocal solos by Marion Oehme '30, piano selections by Mabel Thomas '30, a talk on Rubenstein and his works by Olive Osterhout and a discussion of the life of Louise Homer by Catherine MacLean. Plans were made to offer a scholarship to some girl who shows marked musical ability but cannot afford to carry on her training.

Mac Hall Chooses Favorite Writers

What do Mac Hall girls like to read? When the bitter winds of winter blow outside the windows, and roommates contend for the chair nearest the radiator what books are chosen to pass the time that the weather man declares must be spent indoors?

Charles Dickens is the blue ribbon novelist while Sir Walter Scott and Grace S. Richmond tie for second place. Gene Stratton Porter and Peter B. Kyne take third honors. Joseph Conrad fourth.

Tennyson leads the poets in popularity with Shakespeare, Shelley, Wordsworth, Browning and Edgar A. Guest his nearest competitors.

Mark Twain, Kipling, Elmer Glynne, Harold Bell Wright, Robert Burns and H. L. Mencken received honorable mention.

W. S. G. A. STARTS DRIVE FOR NEW GIRLS' DORM

The Women's Student Government Association has begun a campaign for the new girls' dormitory and is working toward a goal of five hundred dollars. To acquaint the girls of the details of the project and to arouse their enthusiasm, a mass meeting was held in the auditorium Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Gumble, Master of the Penn State Grange spoke to the girls, telling them of the origin of the movement and of the Grange's interest in it. The President also spoke urging the girls to cooperate heartily in the campaign which opened Thursday morning at eight o'clock.

Boxers Schedule Six Season Engagements

Overweight and poor condition, however, have handicapped the Lion mauler, but sparring with the shifty Lion captain is giving MacAndrews an opportunity to round into fighting shape.

T. at State College, February twenty-fifth; Pennsylvania at Philadelphia March third; Temple at State College, March tenth; Intercollegiate at Philadelphia, March sixteenth and seventeenth.

C. C. C. To Give Tea For Freshmen and New Girls

The Campus Club Council will hold a tea in Women's Building tomorrow afternoon from two to five o'clock for all Freshmen and new girls. Girls who have not received their invitations should call at Dean Ray's office for them immediately.

Liberal Arts School Changes Curriculum

Referring to alleged 'cribbing,' he declared that in his actual teaching experience he did not find the practice very prevalent, but confessed that he was not so well acquainted with the situation at present.

"We have been thinking of starting a new system of study at Penn State, one which is a modification of the one which is used at the University of Pennsylvania."

"But this plan would have to be modified for us here," he concluded. "We have no facilities, no class rooms, no study accommodations, for such a course of study. In this method the final examination is entirely justifiable."

Dean Stoddart explained that this being done because only twelve of more students have been graduated from this curriculum since its inception. Most of the pre-legal students have been taking a four-year course and received the bachelor's degree before entering law school.

Because of the increased demand that there has been for such a course during the past few years, and because of the inquiries concerning such a course, a major course in art has also been added.

Subject to the approval of the trustees of the College the separate curriculum in pre-legal study will be abolished and consolidated with arts and letters as a major study.

Dean Stoddart Talks On Final Examinations

Several years ago, the dean described the plan he used in his classes. The class members were told to bring their text books and notes to the recitation room on a certain date and were given a problem to solve with the aid of the notes and text at that time. The Liberal Arts dean found this method quite successful.

Referring to alleged 'cribbing,' he declared that in his actual teaching experience he did not find the practice very prevalent, but confessed that he was not so well acquainted with the situation at present.

"We have been thinking of starting a new system of study at Penn State, one which is a modification of the one which is used at the University of Pennsylvania."

Nittany Quint Meets Penn Team Tomorrow

The erratic shooting and loose defense work of the Lions in the Lebanon Valley tilt must be vastly improved if they wish to meet Penn on an equal footing tomorrow night. The sinking of three fouts out of sixteen attempts shows the weakness of the Nittany team in this department of the game. Coach Hermann must find it necessary to make some changes in the varsity line-up before the encounter with the Red and Blue.

Poor Shooting

Although the final score was 41-22 in favor of the Lions and the opponents never became dangerous, the Penn State courtmen played below their potential standard Wednesday night. During the entire game the Nittany passers missed shot after shot under the basket and from the field and in the second half, the defense became loose and allowed the Amvils five to score an equal number of points in that period.

The Blue and White floor men played fast basketball during the first half, gaining a 26-7 advantage. Coach Hermann sent in the second-string passers at the beginning of the final period and they managed to maintain the nineteen-point lead.
