BOOSTERS

The girls who go in for campus activities and the girls who try to help others are boosters.

They bring encouragement wherever they go. They try to find the kind and pleasant thing to say. Yet they do not make themselves ridiculous by an indiscriminate profusion of compliments.

There are always with us the people who love the music of hammers knocking. They tear down ruthlessly without any regard for the great vacancy that is left by what has been removed. They are engineers of destruction.

It is not always easy in rain or shine, through thick and thin, to smile and be gentle and to keep one's temper. It is not always easy, when one feels that a wrong decision has been made, to keep back the detrimental remarks that come so quickly. Nor is it a small task to keep from knocking when your candidate loses a coveted office.

But the sort of folk who push what deserves to be pushed, forward a girl or movement that has a right to win, are boosters and constitute the best possible advertisement at a time when public gaze is particularly searching.

Sandwich Holds Place of Honor

There is no truer indication of the condition of many things on Penn State campus than the humble sandwich.

To one skilled in interpreting details it is more enlightening than reams of questionnaire, yards of editorial, or hours of discussion groups.

Are Mac Hall meals failing to satisfy the inner woman? Girls invade tea rooms seeking three-decker sandwiches. A cheese sandwich indicates low financial resources. A chicken or club sandwich means the opposite. A hamburger sandwich is the favorite order to be delivered at the dormitory when substance is needed for mental efforts made while buring the midnight electric light.

If an organization needs funds the Mac Hall dining room becomes the headquarters of a sandwich agency and the hot dog sizzles merrily. Girls, defying protocol, announce their wares. The rapid sales prove the esteem in which college students hold the sandwich honor to its inventor and may his contribution to present day civilization be commemorated by a sandwich carved in marble. Less worthy achievements have been thus honored.

It costs a lot, but Camel must have the best

It is true that Camel is the quality cigarette, but it costs to make it so. To make Camel the favorite that it is, costs the choicest crops of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown. It requires the expense of a blending that leaves nothing undone in the liberation of tobacco taste and fragrance.

But the fame that Camel has won is worth all the trouble. It has brought modern smokers a new realization of excellence. They are particular and fastidious and they place Camel first.

Your taste will delight itself in these choice tobaccos. Camels get better the more of them you smoke. Their subtle tastes are unfolded by experience. They are always delightfully smooth.
