KEEPING TIME

The persons who arose the morning after the Prom and made a brave attempt to get back into college found that in spite of their progress smoothly the "tick" of the difficulty could have been avoided had not Old Main clock in this crisis failed.

It seems ridiculous that any clock should become so essential to a student body as to completely disorganize a day's activities by refusing to keep time. There were plenty of other clocks in the college but the one we had been depending upon had proved unreliable. And that was the tragedy of it!

If there was ever a time on the Penn State campus when every "girl" should sense the portent of her responsibility it is now. The future of Penn State rests with every individual and the success of every new project depends upon the reliability of each girl.

Your job, whether small or large, is placing responsibility on your shoulders and the rest of the college is judging you by the way you are playing the part.

Don't allow some petty criticisms to check your speed, and if someone throws snow in your face don't, like the Old Main clock, let it stop your hands from keeping time.

Real Country Fair Comes to Armory

Hypnotism! Side shows! Dancing! All at the Owens Country Fair. The Armory will be the scene of these unique affairs. There have been dances in that old Armory before—Junior Proms, Senior Balls, and even "Ag" All-College dances, but there has never been a dance like this one.

The Fair will seek with the farm and the past, but it will have a tinge of the collegiate. The "For Gentlemen Only" booth will catch the eye of every collegian (male) who has a nickel.

Animals never before known to inhabit campus will be chained in captivity for a few hours to fill the menagerie. Then there will be exhibits. And such exhibits Penn State has never seen, neither down in Engineering F, nor up on "Ag" Hill.

The posters over campus and town have aroused the curiosity of everyone and the whole college is looking with eagerness toward the Fair with a "million laughs a minute".

Agriculturists Plan Lighting Experiments

Cooperating with the Electric Utilities Corporation, the department of Agriculture recently completed arrangements for a rural electrification research project.

The object of the experiments will be to study the application of the portable electric motor to various farm operations and to find a practical method of electric refrigeration for the cooling of milk on the farm. The main problem confronting the scientists is to find a way of loading the power lines sufficiently to print both the farmer and the utility companies so that the farmer may be placed in a position to eliminate labor by the use of electric power.
