Bond Committee Wants Every Girl in Campaign

The campaign for the eight million dollar bond issue is being supported by a committee of girls under the chairmanship of Martha Keck, '29.

This committee is in charge of the distribution of "Workers Handbooks" among the women students. These handbooks contain all the information necessary for anyone working for the bond issue. The plan is to make every woman student an active campaigner during the summer vacation and up until November sixth when the issue will be decided.

Bond Issue Campaign Opens Among Students

nection with the successful passage of the Bond Issue amendment.

Influence 400,000 Voters.
"It is hoped," says Holmes, "to influence four hundred thousand voters of the State to vote for the Bond Issue through this movement among the students. If every one of the four thousand Penn State students makes it his business to see that twenty personal friends approve of the measure and each one of these twenty influence five more, the issue will receive four hundred thousand favorable votes at the very least."

The purpose of distributing the booklet is to give each student a general working knowledge of the facts pertaining to the successful amendment of the State Constitution. This must be done in order that Penn State may receive the eight million dollar for new buildings and equipment.

College Publicity Campaign
Late this summer, the College through the department of public information, will carry on an extensive general publicity campaign in newspapers throughout Pennsylvania.

Bond Issue facts are to be presented through this medium in the fall.

During the summer, when the voters will be desisting for their facts relative to the project, it will be the duty of every college student to offer such information, and the booklet, which explains the issue from every angle, will enable every worker to present the general facts accurately and fully.

"In addition," continued the student chairman, "by raising student interest we hope to show the electorate that the Bond Issue is not simply a project of the College officials but that the students are intensely interested in it as well."

Content of Booklet
Forty-five questions and answers are enumerated in the handbook as well as a number of vital talking points to show why Penn State is so deserving of financial help. Among other things the pamphlet shows that the Penn State Bond Issue will be the second one on a list of fourteen constitutional amendments which will be placed on the ballots this fall. The first would authorize the State to do its own printing.

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS

The other day a Senior was overheard analyzing her sentiments on graduation, and we listened because most Seniors give such ambiguous answers when questioned on the subject.

"You have a delightful feeling of being about to shoulder a great responsibility," said the Senior, "but the minute that idea comes to your mind, you feel a pang of regret at closing the door to the irresponsible days. You like the idea that you are no longer a member of a great college group but an individual on your own, but then you suddenly realize that you can't ever be an independent individual because you are going to belong to a group that has harder lines than the college."

"We Seniors know that you undergraduates are sorry to see us leave, but when we come back next year on Alumni Day you will have forgotten us. We tell ourselves that that is as it should be, but nevertheless it is probably the thing that hurts most about graduation. We have come to the end of the paved street and look back, but we know it lies with us to take the trails."

Because we know that the tie that binds the Seniors to Penn State is a deep regard for their fellow students, and because we realize that as each Senior finds suc-

Man Riled by Rivals' Time Claims

Gentlemen:

I sure get some riled when I see where some fellow is crowing over the fact that being older, and having run into Edgeworth sooner than his less fortunate compatriots, he challenges the world as the champion long-time member of the Edgeworth Club.

He doesn't deserve any medals. He got his reward in the enjoyment of his smoking for the added number of years he was just lucky in starting sooner, that's all.

However, if you care to delve into ancient history, look up when they first started to pull down the old Grand Central Station in New York; then add at least six months to that, and you will arrive at the approximate time when I first joined the club.

I have smoked at least one pipeful of every other tobacco I have seen advertised, sometimes through necessity, but most of the time to prove to myself that I have been right in sticking to the old blue tin.

Yours truly,
H. M. Wittridge
