College Enlists Help For Bond Issue Drive

immense amount of work between now and election day.

With approximately thirty thousand of the fifty thousand workers enlisted in the drive actually doing their share or a little more than their share, efforts must be redoubled in the next six weeks to inform more voters that the Bond Issue is to be voted upon in November.

There is no organized opposition to the Penn State bond issue amendment, or at least no reports of this kind have come to College officials from anywhere. Campaign work during the summer has shown conclusively that merely calling attention of voters to the fact that State College wants Amendment No. 2 passed, has won pledges of votes. It is entirely possible that more than half of the Pennsylvania voters know absolutely nothing of the College crisis or of the Bond Issue coming to a vote in November.

Even though a general newspaper publicity campaign was started July thirtieth, relatively few voters get information from that source, and the announcement last spring that the campaign could be won by word of mouth publicity and direct contact still holds true, more than ever before, according to those in charge of the campaign.

"Talk It Up"
"Talk it up!" is now the order of the day, and how the student body can do its share will be announced shortly by the student committee headed by Archibald M. Holmes '29.

Since the publication of the workers' handbook that was distributed to students last spring, the major publicity literature for the campaign has been printed and over half a million copies distributed to alumni, parents and other campaign workers, many of them men and women in no way connected with the college except through their friendly attitude and interest in higher public education.

The major piece is an eight page folder printed on light paper so it can be used as a "stuffer" in mail to business men. By mid-October more than a million of these folders will have been printed and placed in circulation throughout the State. Student use of this folder will be announced shortly. Posters and "hand-out" cards will also be circulated just prior to the election.

Expenses of the educational campaign are being paid through funds provided by the Association of Parents of Penn State, by alumni and former students and friends of the College. At the Commencement alumni banquet in June the alumni authorized the Alumni Association directors to raise a Bond Issue fund, and contributions to this fund have been coming in all summer.

Hibshman Directs Campaign
Edward K. Hibshman, assistant to the President of the College, is the active director of the campaign, and headquarters are located in his office on the second floor of Old Main. Headquarters management has been di-

Grange. Both the State and National Grange Masters are advocating the passage of the measure at every opportunity when addressing Grange, farm or business gatherings. They feel that it is a sound investment and will bring benefits to future generations.

The State Education Association, of which every public school teacher in the State is a member, has endorsed the measure, as did the annual gathering of school superintendents held here during the summer. President Hetzel addressed the record attendance of 2500 summer session students, telling of the College needs, and each of these students was enlisted as a worker. They received copies of the workers' handbook and the Bond Issue folder.

Students Refused Admission
Just now the principal arguments in favor of the passage of the Bond Issue are based on the record number of applications turned away from the freshman class this year, and in the fact that the College, to make progress efficiently and economically, must have an assured income over a period of years.

President Hetzel left Monday for Wilkes-Barre, Scranton and Philadelphia, in the interests of the bond issue campaign. He was accompanied by Henry D. Brown, a member of the Board of Trustees, who has been acting chairman of the trustee committee directing the drive, while E. S. Bayard, of Pittsburgh, chairman of that committee, was in Europe.

A short motion picture with "thumb nail" sketches of Penn State life is to be made within a few days, possibly Saturday. It will be a "trailer" for news reels and placed by alumni in motion picture theatres over the State during October.

Chemistry and Physics Seniors Rank First in Carnegie Examinations

Completion of the tabulation of intelligence tests given to seniors last spring shows that the School of Chemistry and Physics ranks first among the various schools at this college.

Closely following the leader was the School of Liberal Arts and the School of Education. The average score for the five hundred tests given at Penn State was 490.7.

The highest individual score in the test was secured by Alfred E. James with a mark of 1104. The next highest scores were made by Frederick A. Schaeffer and John E. Venable.

Conducted purely as an experiment by the Carnegie Foundation, the test is not likely to be made a yearly occurrence.

It did prove that those standing highest in scholarship rated high in the test, according to those in charge.

Results obtained by the test do not seem to prove that those taking liberal education studies range any higher than those following technical professions. As yet no definite conclusions can be drawn since the standings of other colleges have not been made known.

Dramatists Select Six Productions For Year

spent assisting the famous playwright, Hatcher Hughes, author of the popular plays "Hell Bent for Heaven" and "Raint." Prof. David D. Mason will assist also in the work.

One of the best attended enactments in the history of the organization was "The Poor Nut," which was staged during the latter part of last semester. Because it was attended mostly by the graduates and their parents, Professor Cloetngh favors staging it again this year for the benefit of those who were unable to attend.

Prexy Hetzel Greet Freshmen Tomorrow

'29, president of the Athletic Association, will preside at the athletic meeting Tuesday night. All freshmen are urged to attend the four meetings while upperclassmen are invited to the last two assemblies.

Military uniforms will be issued to the new students at designated hours during the week in the basement of McAllister Hall.

All freshmen will be given a psychological test today and will be required to take a physical examination at the time specified in the Freshman Week Bulletin.

A reception for new students will be given by the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. next Friday evening on the front campus. At that time customs will be cast aside and the freshmen will have a chance to meet many of the student leaders. Besides mingling with their fellow classmates the newcomers will be acquainted more fully with the customs and traditions of Penn State.

The proposed program will include selections by the College Band and the Glee Club. Short addresses of welcome will be made by prominent student leaders and members of the College faculty.

Origin of Freshman Week
Freshman Week was inaugurated at Penn State in September 1925 and has been continued since then. All new students reported for meetings as scheduled and welcomed the opportunity to become accustomed to their new environment. In this manner the freshman was brought into intimate contact with the dean of his school, the head of his department and the administrative officers of the College. He was given a thorough interpretation of customs and traditions of the College and was introduced to his place in athletics and the R. O. T. C.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN

in the blindfold cigarette test

Famous star selects OLD GOLD

"One cigarette of the four I smoked in the blindfold test was like shooting a scene successfully after a whole series of failures. It just 'clicked' and I named it as my choice. It was Old Gold. Which clears up a mystery, for the supply of Old Golds in my Beverly Hills home is constantly being depleted. It seems that Strongheart and Rin-tin-tin are the only motion picture stars who don't smoke them."

Charlie Chaplin

Made from the heart-leaves of the tobacco plant

CHARLIE CHAPLIN... movie favorite the world over, in one of his best-loved pictures—"The Circus."

MR. CHAPLIN was asked to smoke each of the four leading brands, clearing his taste with coffee between smokes. Only one question was asked: "Which one do you like the best?"

How does OLD GOLD do it?

What's the secret of OLD GOLD'S winning charm? The answer is very simple. Three types of leaves grow on the tobacco plant... coarse, heavy top-leaves, irritating to the throat... withered ground-leaves, without taste or aroma... and the heart-leaves, rich in cool and fragrant smoking qualities. These golden-ripe heart-leaves give OLD GOLD'S their honey-like smoothness. That's why so many people choose them. And that's why you too can pick them... even in the dark.
