

M. I. T. Professor Says Americans Think as Women

American thinking is feminine thinking, inculcated by women teachers, highly competent in detail, inordinate in its application, rigidly idealistic regardless of the working fact, and weak on critical examination. Prof. Robert E. Rogers, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology told the sixteenth annual national business conference at Babson Park.

The professor, who created a national sensation last spring by advising the senior class at M. I. T. to be snobs, analyzed "Our Young People" at the conference.

"Our boys and girls have not been taught to think," he said. "They are interested in applications, not ideals and principles. Above all they have not been taught to criticize or analyze."

"They come to higher education and life with a settled conviction that the only allowable criticism is 'constructive', as if one could construct without first tearing down."

"Whose fault is it? For a half century now the largest part of our young people have been trained exclusively by women teachers. The faults I have been speaking about are the faults of women teachers. Fifty years of this has produced a people incompetent to think politically and socially."

PROF. GAUM CITES NEED FOR HUMAN ENGINEERING

"Most men use only about one-third of their natural ability, seven out of ten are in the wrong jobs, and what is wasted by the average American family would support them. More attention should be given to human productiveness. We should develop a science of human engineering," declared Prof. Charles G. Gaum of the engineering extension division in the first of his series of lectures on personal efficiency.

Prof. Gaum stated that the "human engineer" is needed to correct present-day wastes in human energy and time. He demonstrated that masters of men just have been masters over themselves, that the successful man today is the one who develops himself, and one who is always increasing his personal efficiency to a higher point.

ENGINEERS OBTAIN LIBRARY

A reading and reference room equipped for engineering students will be one of the features of the new Main Engineering building. Engineering periodicals and more than five hundred reference books formerly kept in the Carnegie Library will be placed at the disposal of the students.

Member of First Dink-Donning Class Recalls Smoking by Privileged Plebes

"It was my misfortune to be a member of the first class to wear a dink but my good fortune to have the privilege of smoking publicly," declared J. R. Arwell '09, now head of the training department of the Baton Construction company.

Mr. Arwell claims that in this eventful year about 200 freshmen entered the already ancient corridors of "Old Main." Three women at that time were responsible for the name codes which today includes several hundred.

"Upperclassmen of those days attended chapel wearing corduroy trousers and blue shirt, to say nothing of a broad-rimmed straw hat," continued the speaker. "The entire student body occupied the front lower floor of Schwab auditorium with the freshmen in the back wherever they could find a seat."

The speaker went on to say that each incoming class held an annual banquet, usually at Williamsport and attended by as many freshmen as could manage to escape from the sophomores in the final dash for the special train furnished by the Bellefonte Central. He recalled many horse and buggy rides to Bellefonte, almost a day's excursion at that time.

"There existed also a requirement that all freshmen had to pass public speaking before they could take the first semester examinations," explained the speaker. "This unpopular ruling, finally resulted in a strike which lasted for three weeks, during which time noboddy attended classes. The faculty," he continued, "finally consented to change the system and as a result the first Student Council was formed."

"With conditions such as these to deal with," Mr. Arwell concluded, "the class of '09 should feel very fortunate that they are exactly twenty-four years later in seeking their education."

STUDENT CRUISE LANDS AT GLASGOW, SCOTLAND

Composed of students drawn from every section of the United States, the third University World Cruise arrived in Glasgow, Scotland, Sunday. The cruise, lasting seven months, will encompass the earth.

The first semester's work calls for a tour of England and Europe during which the students will visit nine countries and seventy-three towns and cities. Beginning at Naples in January, the second semester will consist of a tour of the lands of the eastern Mediterranean and of the Orient.

More than one hundred universities have granted credits to students taking previous cruises, according to records of the University Travel association. Public lectures, round-table conferences, and discussions on the lands to be visited are included in the tour.

COLLEGE PRESIDENTS CALL WEEK-END TRIPS HARMFUL

Week-end trips of undergraduates are "harmful physically and mentally," agree President James R. Angell, of Yale university, and President Henry N. McCracken, of Vassar college. Both presidents agree that absences are harmful to good health and should be reduced in number.

COLLEGE STUDENTS EARN $2,000,000 DURING YEAR

The popular conception that college students are youths with their own cars and lots of spending money, does not "hitch" with the figures given out by the alumni bureau of occupations at the University of California, which reports that last year students at the university earned a total of more than one million dollars while taking their regular college courses.

The bureau this year is seeking to increase that earning power of the students to two million dollars. Five thousand students at the school are said to be either totally or partially self-supporting, which represents 75 percent of the student body.
