THE PUNCH-THAT COUNTS

True to prediction, Penn State's mystery football team felt the sting of defeat for the first time Saturday when New York university's not-weak eleven rebound-ed tran it cally season loss to Fordham with increased power Seven point: the margin of victory, is not a true picture of the time however. On the contrary, Hugo Bezdek's pupils clearly outplayed their staunch rivals but simply lacked the punch to cross the hinal chalk line Time and again the hard-hitting Lion backfield smished its way to within scoring distance only to lose possession of the ball Regardless the Bezdek eleven was immessive in deleat and it is not foolhardy to expect triumphs over more deadly rivals this season

THE ART OF NEGLECT

When a non-swimmer falls into deep water, the result is a loud splash, followed by wild thrashing of react is a local spinsing possible stora-like descent to ob-hivion if there is no helping hand near. In college many students find themselves engulfed in so many activities, social, academic, and otherwise, that they feel just like a non-swimmer - Dividing one's time between the various obligations so that the greatest benefit ma be derived in the end might be termed "The Art of Neg-

That any student should have so many nons in the ine, that he should be connected with so many organizations as to make it impossible to give due notice to his lesson tasks is a soiry situation, but nevertheless a common one At Penn State nothing has ever been cooled to prevent such a condition, no restrictions be-ing placed upon the number of activities a student may enter except that he must not flunk too many sub-jects. Here there is no end to what an ambitious youngster may accomplish in the way of campus honors ster may accomplish in the way of campus honors Then, too, the lazy element in every student's makeup usually prompts him to beheve that he has too much work to do. The many activities man is certain-ly not lazy, but he frequently finds that there are far too many demands upon his time, he feels that he is floundering in a sea of work. The only life-line that can be there it o other true of much as one that the buyedf be thrown to either type of man is one that he himself must cast, he must learn and practice the art of neglect. Here task, he must rearrang practice the act of negrector Her must lean to discriminate between that which will be beneficial to him in later life and that which is plaun-ly a waste of time and energy.

WHY BE A SNOB?

Because he advised the June graduates of Massa-chusetts Institute of Technology to "Le snobs" Prof Robert I' Rogers of that institution unconsciously achieved nation-wide publicity over night. The leading achieved nation-wide publicity over hight The feating newspapers in every State gave the story front page space. Numerous editors printed editorials on the statement, some plasming, some blaming hum for his be-het. Letters of agreement and disagreement with Rogers' ideas pouried into his office daily, most of the discipreeing ones showing a decided misunderstanding of the tow such of the term snob In America the word snob-means "one who himsell better than the average and behaves on that assumption" This further means that any appenditions of superiority will call forth that epithet from people of superiority will call forth that epithel from peopler who know no better. Professon Rogers was trying to impress upon the graduating men that each represented a large amount of money, time, energy and patience spent, and that the group should, obviously, represent an intellectual aristocracy. Had this man considered an intellectual aristociacy Had this man considered college students as a whole, perhaps he would have changed his phraseology a bit since there are man setu-dents who graduate "is the skin of their tech". But he was addressing a distinct group of men, each one of whom represented the sole survivor of one hundred hows who had started in the public schools. Why, then, should there not he a feeding of mellectual survivor should there not be a feeling of intellectual superiority among these men"

Furthermore, Professor Rogers explained that "Be 2 Sool" means "Be a gentleman " The word gentleman 1' a matter of manners and good breeding A fine en-gineering mind may be disastrously handicapped by the manners of a rough-neck, while a less fine mind may be curred to success by the right kind of manners Mil Rogers puts the thing a bit too strongly, however, when he saves that the undergraduate manners of our colleges everywhere are getting worse each year. He based his statement on his experiences in a limited number of collges, assuming that the same is true of every institution

But Professor Rogers has brought out several un-But Professor Rogers and strong to dit several un-delatable points. Colleges and universities through-out the United State are gradually beginning to realize that from a business point of view a graduate must be a snob, or gentleman, if he wishes to succeed in his work. Penn State has recognized this necessity and has ac condingly incorporated in the general customs a rule that 'No unsportmanslike or ungentlemanly conduct that "No unsport manuface of ungent emanty conduct shall be permitted at any athletic event" The fact is that college graduates should sense then superiority and, although, it might cause ill feeling at times, they will discover themselves much faither ahead in the end. It is no disgrace to be a gentleman and a snob.

THE LION'S DEN -BY DANIEL Wow' what a wild week-end we had—attending the soccei game and telegraphic football ietuins. Someone, it seems didn't enjoy the journey to New York for Saturday's game. Says a dispatch re-ceived in this office last night "An esthetic soul of ceived in this office last mght "An esthetic soul of the Penn State football squad unon leaving for State College today declared his visit to the Big City a fail-ure because he couldn't find any Violets to pluck." (Name of said esthetic soul supplied free upon re-ceipt of two-cent stamp. No used ones accepted)

For instance, one cub reporter is In to Daniel, for instance, one can reporter to taking a course in Shakespeare. One night last welk he wandleid into the office, possessed of a studious mien, sat down before a typewriter, and began to hunt and poke, with the following result

What, ho' And how' Rumor has it that vesternight a sinning collegian plagued with sprites and el-fins did invade the wild of Watts there to answer to a summons charging him with pawing up a campus way astride his gear-ed mount at what's o'clock

"Stand" quoth the D-of-M "Go to!" replied ou pee "Perforce, I can do naught but that, to: the chairs are filled " "Even so, and anon, anon But have your word " "Perforce, I can do "Ave, and so I shall, methinks "

(Attendant, like unto the Lafe and Death of John, leads in many-colored geai-ed n the throttle)

"Welcome, ass," said the culprit "Here's your rattling tinny mount." declareth attendant "Ah, hat Evidence for the gods," quoth the D-of-M.

"I'm sunk!" spake the culput collegian. "But here's my word "Twas the night before the last that we were a-making merry with the Merry Wives of Windsor But we were not, as rumor hath informed, whitese Full we were not, as tunne have mean morning, a-liquored of the Cat's wine. Never have we partaken of Measure for Measure of such But our unworthy mount snorted and pawed on the campus way, as thou has learned. And so came I here!"

"Guilty, art thou adjudged," opined the judge. "Know you not the age-old decree that no man shall cause his mount to pay and snort on the campus wave

"Long have I heard of it " "Even so. Then your lot shall be that of the Pass-ionate Pilgrim. Go you fai from here even so far as unto the house of your site and let your tinny mount and snort there Avaunt rascal!"

We were almost atraid to print the above story at just for fear that the mighty Lions would eat puny
