A CALENDAR'S TEST

The appointment of a committee from Studen Coard to confer with College officials in the compilation of next year's calendar certainly is a step in the right direction Although such a committee v.s appointed last year, its failure to meet with the facelity group opented the opinion that undergraduates by i not been consulted In an earnest desire to give voice to student eentiment, this week the facula group extended an in-vitation to Student Board to help in the formation of a de-trable calendar

Restricted, in a sense, by the desirability of beginning the school term late in September, and ending ning the school fein late in September, and ending early in June, the task of pleasing everyone in the computation of a calendari is not an ensy one Undoubt-cally student opinion is divided on what are believed to be unpopular vacation allotments. The Christmas re-cess is an outstanding illustration. While there are some who complain that the period is too short to per-turbance of the period is too short to permit financial gains by working, there are still others who contend that the percentage of student workers is relatively small, and that those few could be dismiss-is relatively small, and that those few could be dismiss-ed earlier without upsetting the entire College There is, however, strong opposition to a long recess between semesters. If the clerical duties associated with the recording of grades and the registration of students can be speeded up-and it is believed that they will—there is no doubt that the period will be shortened in most target, clearly a The arcent mean up the will—there is no doubt that the period will be sholtened in next year's calendar. This year's most point was the Thanksgrving vacation. Opinion is divided on the ques-tion of restricting the recess to the one day, or including the entire week-end. An expression of student opinion on all of these matters would be of invaluable and to the compilers of next year's calendar.

Numberless students afford themselves the oppor-Numberless students afford themselves the oppor-tunity nowadays to enjoy outdoor recreation at the re-centity-acquired Winter Sports park. Undergraduates anyious to cut a hyure eight on the rec have expressed displeasure, however, that arrangements apparently have not been made by the College to clear the point of 'row regularly. Likewise, no facilities have been pro-yided for skatting after nightfall

DIVIDING FOOTBALL HONORS

Although no strong objection to the present system of electing a football captain has been voiced in campus encles, there is a feeling that the "no-captain" system would meet with equal favor. Fortunately, fraternity politics has not played have with football captaincies at Penn State as it has at other colleges and universi-tics. Notwithstanding this good fortune. Penn State's Notwithstanding this good fortune, Penn State's griditon leaders have had more than their share of illluck during the past few years

Certainly Jack Martin was descrying of a better Certainly Jack Martin was deserving of a better faite this fail. Knowing that do team needed reserve backs, Martin sacrificed an opportunity to earn a regu-lat post on the line in order to fill this want Ordinari-ly this sacrifice would discourage any football captain, but Martin displayed the true qualities of lendership by sucking to his team throughout He closed this unwrit-ing the sacrifice. sucking to his team throughout He closed this unwrit-ten ch. tei in Penn State football history by perform-ing buillantly when called upon to fill a vacant place on the line in the las, game of the season Martin was not the first Penn State lootball captain not to be favored by the gods. His predecessors, Donn Greenshelds and Johnny Roepke, got anything but good

'Lieaks' Notwithstanding these setbacks, Penn State toochall teams invariably went on under new leaderforchait teams invariancy war on under new reader-shin, it not successfully, the lack of leadership appar-ently was not the reason. This fact demonstrates rath-ci forcibly the fallaciousness of any objections is chang-ing the captainey from game to game under the "no-captain" system.

Another point to be considered is the presumably large unmber of gridmen eligible for the honor this large unnuel of glidhich eligible for the honor this seal on the scrength of performance Kaplan, Ed-wards, Shawley, Zorella, Fiench, Evans, and Diedrich are prospective leaders. To the student observer, the electron of a captam from this group appears difficult. However that may be, the "no-captam" system would permit each of these men to shoulder the responsibil-ties of leadership in turn, and at the end of the season same an honorary candau from momer them. name an honorary captain from among them.
