

Jiggs Barks Views Of Kennel Life in Telephonic Speech

Barking in a brief but unique telephonic interview, Jiggs, canine pet of the campus, yesterday silenced numerous queries of his admirers who missed the wire-haired terrier from his position at the side of his master, Dr. Edwin S. Reifer.

In answer to many questions about the whereabouts of the dog who has amused many with his antics, Andrew J. Zaiger, chief of campus police, explained that Jiggs has been transferred to a kennel at his home near Boalsburg.

When asked about Jiggs in an interview over the telephone, Chief Zaiger called the wire-haired terrier to the instrument.

"I'll let him tell you about it himself," he announced, chucking it.

"Jiggs, speak for the reporter."

The little dog, in a series of excited staccato barks, when asked to sing, he complied with a variety of yips and howls.

The advice that no one can teach an old dog new tricks fails miserably when applied to the clever Jiggs, who has acquired several new antics in the care of his present master.

"I've managed to teach him how to put out a fire," the chief declared. "It was a hard job at first, because when he tried it for the first time he burnt his nose. He was persuaded to try again, and now extinguishes it with his paws, scratching vigorously until the fire is out."

"He and the baby have a game that they play, also," Mr. Zaiger concluded. "I hide the baby, and Jiggs goes hunting for it. He always manages to find it, too."

CWENS DEVOTE WEEK TO ASSISTING 1933 WOMEN

Sophomore Activities Group Begins Work With Dinner for Plebes.

Cwens celebrated the opening of a week devoted to special activity in helping freshman women with a dinner in McAllister Hall dining room last night.

The twelve active and eighteen auxiliary members of the sophomore activities society had as their guests at this dinner Miss Marie Hilde, instructor in physical education and hygiene for women, and Mrs. F. W. Halter, honorary Cwens Cwen Week, which was instituted at Penn State last year, is held in order to present and make clear to freshman women the meaning and purpose of the organization, according to Dorothy W. Cummings, president of the society.

PRESBYTERIANS LEAD IN STUDENT REGISTRATION

Official Statistics List Methodists As Second Largest Group

Presbyterians lead in the number of students enrolled this year in the College, according to statistics compiled at the Registrar's office during the past week.

In listing the first eight denominations represented at Penn State, Presbyterians were first with 920 students, Methodists followed with 792, while Lutherans were third with 517. There are 165 undergraduates listed as Roman Catholics, 265 as members of the Reformed church, and 224 expressed a preference for the Protestant Episcopal church.

One hundred and seventy members of the Jewish faith enrolled, while the Baptist church has one hundred and forty-five representatives. One student is a member of the Swedenborgian church, one is a Moslem, and one signed as a spiritualist.

Youth 15, Co-ed 44 Claim Age Crowns

Age and youth both come to Penn State. The oldest student entered in an undergraduate course is forty-four, while the youngest is fifteen, according to a survey recently carried on by the Registrar's office.

A woman entered as a senior in the School of Education is the oldest undergraduate. A freshman in the Liberal Arts School claims the least number of years, with fifteen to his credit.

The average age of the entire College is twenty-one. Further statistics show that seniors are twenty-two, juniors twenty-one, sophomores twenty, and freshmen nineteen.

Twenty-one students entered at Penn State were born before 1900. Three freshmen claim twenty-seven years to lead in that class, while in contrast to this a sophomore woman is the youngest co-ed enrolled, with an age of sixteen.

TO OPEN CRIME SCHOOL

A scientific school for the detection of crime, affiliated with the law school at Northwestern university, will be opened next month under the direction of Col. M. Goddard, the foremost American expert on ballistics.

'Colliers,' 'Saturday Evening Post' Gain Student Popularity

That Colliers and Saturday Evening Post are the most popular magazines sold here was revealed by a survey yesterday of the four leading news-dealers in State College.

Although Colliers was given as having the highest sale by three out of four dealers the opinion was expressed that were not the copies of Saturday Evening Post on sale limited, it is possible that it would prove as popular as Colliers. Third in popularity is Liberty which also has a large circulation here.

The leading monthly publication is Cosmopolitan which is especially popular among the co-eds. Not far behind Cosmopolitan are the American and College Humor. Other popular magazines are Woman's Home Companion, Red Book, Literary Digest, McCall's, Golden Book, Pictorial Review, and Popular Mechanics.

It was explained that while True Stories and True Experiences had a comparative large circulation, their sale was largely restricted to women of the town. Snappy Stories, Hot Dog and other magazines of this type were said to have a very limited sale.

THE BEST NATURED MAN

UNDERNOURISHMENT and a pleasant disposition don't mix. The "best natured man" of the senior class isn't the one who spends his time smiling through a series of minor ills.

Shredded Wheat is the natural breakfast for good-natured college men. It supplies all the vital food elements that keep their spirits high. It's easy to digest and provides the bran to keep the system clear.

If you want to start the day with a cheerful outlook eat two Shredded Wheat biscuits every morning with good rich milk and plenty of fruit. It clears away those dark mental clouds in a hurry.
