assured us was the announcement that the co-eds had nominated three seniors and an "unknown" for May Queen. While our interest at present is only passing, we confess that our eyes are inevitably attracted to Sunday rotogravule sections during the pre-graduation month. With this prejudice firmly in mind, we have only to hope that Penn State's May Queen compares favorably with the choices of rival colleges.

UNDER THE MICROSCOPE

State College 15 the center of activity to editors end business managets of college newspapers, humor magazines, and yearbooks from forty-four colleges and magazine«, and yearbooks from forty-four colleges and universities throughout the country today for the twen-tech anniversary convention of P1 belta Epsilon, honoi-ary collegiate journalistic fraternity. The influx of delegates, which numbered more than forty last might, is expected to teach twice that number this morning. A guest list so large and distinguished gives promise of encouraging a critical study of Penn State and all that its hopes and ambitions enfold. Penn State is gliad of the onnorthing to indere the close scrutiny of visitors the opportunity to undergo the close scrutiny of visitors from foreign lands, hopeful that they will carry back to their alma maters lasting impressions of our College

Pending Student Council action Monday, the women of the College will pass judgment on the proposed $10 fee for free hospital service Women are particularly interested in the plan since its adoption would assure them of a woman nurse or possibly a woman doctor who would devote her entire time to their cases of sickness But equally important is the initiative and foresight which the W S G A displays in referring the question to the ballot, a "lead" which men's Student Council should follow in the spring elections.

The underlying purpose of a college education, we contend, is to make the world a better place to live in. Unfortunately, our teachers too often interpret this literally. They insist that we should stirve to wake the building of homes, of bridges, of innumerable material things. They never stop to think that to appreciate hearty may perhans contribute to our daily life, and heanty may perhaps contribute to our daily life, and "muke" our world a better place to live in. All too many courses are designed to meet this first demand Why not open the paths to this other world by a more liberal sprinkling of non-practical courses in our more mactical schools?

Walter Winchell says that to arouse interest a columnist should always talk about something that people don't like. With him as an autholity Daniel proposes to open a campaign for the return of com-pulsely chapel
