SCHOLARS RECEIVE HONOR AWARDS OF COLLEGE THURSDAY

Students, Faculty To Assemble For Rites at 8 O'clock in Schwab Auditorium

PRESIDENT WILL PRESIDE AT ACADEMIC EXERCISES

Dr. Crawford, Allegheny Head Is Speaker—Fellowship Rewards Listed

Penn State students and faculty will assemble to honor academic leaders of the college at the annual Scholarship Day exercises in Schwab auditorium at 8 o'clock Thursday night.

Dr. William H. Crawford, president-elect of Allegheny college, will be the principal speaker, while President Ralph D. Hetzel will preside. Prof. John H. Frazzell, head of the public speaking department and acting college chaplain, will deliver the invocation.

A procession of honor students led by the college marshal will open the ceremony. The invocation by Professor Frazzell will follow. Kappa Gamma Psi, honorary musical fraternity, will present a musical selection, the "Zampa Overture," by Handel, immediately after the invocation.

Discussing "The Challenge of the Impossible," President Crawford will next address the assembly. Dr. Crawford became widely known as an educator and a speaker during his presidency at Allegheny college from 1893 to 1920. Among the books which he has written dealing with education and religion are "The Church and the Slum" and "The American College."

A second musical number by Kappa Gamma Psi, a "Ballet Suite," by Chaminade, will conclude the first section of the program. The remainder of the ceremony will be devoted to the presentation of awards for scholastic achievement.

The awarding of elections to honor societies will precede the presentation of cups, prizes and medals. The highest ranking national and local fraternities, as well as the leading girls' organizations will receive scholarship cups from the presidents of their respective councils.

Fifty Honor Society Council medals for underclassmen with the highest averages and twenty additional prizes, will next be presented.

President Hetzel will announce the winners of scholarships and fellowships as the concluding ceremony. Lausse Carnegie scholarships and John D. White scholarships and fellowships are listed among the awards to be made at this time.

Scholarship Day will be marked at Mont Alto with an afternoon program at which members of the school will receive medals offered by the Penn State Honor Society Council. Dean Ralph L. Watts, of the School of Agriculture, will address the forestry school during these exercises.

'SKIDDING' REVEALS FAMILY TROUBLES

Players' 3-Act Comedy Will Appear On Mothers' Day Program Next Saturday

What to do when a college banded daughter, two married daughters, a "wise-cracking" son, a know-it-all aunt, a pottering father-in-law, and an politically inclined husband are all at home will be the problem of Janette M. Burns '30, who plays the role of stage mother in "Skidding," Players' Mothers' Day program being staged for next Saturday night.

Nominees Favor Proposed Increase in Hospital Fees

GEORGE T. LASICH '32

ALFRED E. LEWIS '32

Presidential Candidates Unanimously Support Plan for Free Infirmary Service

Free hospital for Penn State, to be provided by an increase in student registration fees, was given unanimous support by presidential nominees in statements issued last night. In commenting upon the proposal, Paul A. Mitten '31, Locust Lane candidate for the senior class presidency, said:

The increased fee may seem rather high, it is really an increase of but $3 a semester and is well worth a trial. The statement of Glenn E. Thomson '31, independent candidate for the senior leadership, was likewise strongly in favor of the proposal. Presenting his views on the proposal, George T. Lasich '32, Locust Lane aspirant for the junior class presidency said:

CO-EDS SELECT 8 MAY QUEEN AIDES

Choose Heralds, Entertainers to Complete Preparations for Ceremony May 17

In preparation for May Day ceremonies to be held on Holmes Field at 6 o'clock next Saturday afternoon, Helen S. Keepers '30, Mabel A. Thomas '30, Mabel P. White '31, Isabelle J. Wieland '31, Helen M. Kopler '32, Myrtle H. Webb '32, Lorraine F. Lomas '33, and Grace E. McCartney '33, have been chosen as class attendants to the 1930 May Queen.

Helen L. Arnold '33 and Harriet E. Soper '33 will herald the arrival of the queen's party. The procession will include entertainers, president of the W. S. G. A., W. A. A., and Y. M. C. A., attendants from each class, Maid of Honor, Phyllis G. Beidler '33, and Queen of the May, Mary C. Woodson '30.

Campus Cops, May Queens Cavort As Few Freshmen Appear in Frolic

Campus cops united with May queens, relished with a misty past cast in youthful frivolity, and harmless shotgun weddings were brought to reality, when 1933 celebrated a "diss-up" occasion in its Frolic Frolic Saturday afternoon. At 10:30, impersonated by Eastley, who forgot about "Mammy" and could remember only "St. James Infirmary," proved to be the outstanding participant, while three veterans from a nearby infirmary, carrying a stretcher, won second place in the leading division. The "Infirmary" waving their white aprons again, walked off with first place in the float class. Men famous in history, from Ben Hur to the Navy boys, escorted by two Penn students, while a shotgun wedding, popular and all, marched up into third place.

SENIORS RECEIVE 'LA VIE' TOMORROW

Juniors Will Obtain Yearbook May 10—Purchase of Extra Annuals for $5

Distribution of 1930 La Vie supplements will be made when the first group of seniors, arranged alphabetically from A to G, receive their annuals at Montgomery's tomorrow, according to John L. Barnhart '30, business manager of the yearbook.

With the completion of distribution to the seniors this week, the juniors will be allotted their quota of yearbooks next week. Copies for fraternities and friends may be ordered at $5 a copy. To order to receive a supplement, each member of the upper classes must present matriculation and athletic cards for both semesters. Barnhart stated: "I believe it advisable to order extra copies early."

DAIRYMEN OFFER $100 FOR EXPOSITION AWARDS

Science Association Sponsors Annual Cattle Judging Contest Prizes valued at more than $400 will be awarded to winners of the various contests to be staged at the eighth annual college dairy exposition to be held here next Friday and Saturday. Chief among the activities will be contests in dairy cattle and dairy product judging, titting and showing dairy cattle, clean milk production, and a milking contest, in which co-eds will compete. The show, which is sponsored by the Penn State chapters of the American Dairy Science Association, will be under the supervision of T. H. Patton. In addition to cash awards, silver loving cups, medals, ribbons, and dairy equipment will be given winners in the various competition.

FACULTY TO STUDY STUDENTS' USE OF ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Dr. Tschan Heads Investigation Group—School Deans Name Survey Members

COMMITTEE PLANS QUIZ FOR GRADUATING CLASS

Dennis, Chandler, Ash, Steward, Long, Champlin, Stover, Represent College

Methods of improving the English of Penn State students will be studied this spring by a group of seven faculty members, representing the various schools of the college. This study is undertaken at the instigation of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors of which Dr. Francis J. Tschan is head. One member of the committee was selected by the dean of each school. The committee will undertake an initial survey of the situation at its first meeting later this week. Possible plans include an English examination or all graduating students, which they must pass to secure their diplomas.

Each School Represented—Prof. William V. Dennis, head of the rural sociology department, is the member from the Chemistry and Physics school. Prof. Percy Ash will represent the engineers.

The School of Education is represented by Dr. Carroll D. Champlin. Prof. Mason Long from the Liberal Arts school. Prof. James W. Stewart of Mineral Industries and Prof. Harney W. Stover of the School of Physical Education complete the committee.

INSTITUTE SHOWS TRAVELLING EXHIBITION OF 100 DRAWINGS

More than 100 drawings are on display in the traveling exhibition by the Philadelphia chapter of the American Institute of Architecture being held in the Main Engineering building at this week. According to Prof. Clinton L. Hervey, head of the architectural engineering department, the exhibit consists of the best work done by members of the Philadelphia chapter. The sketches were prepared by students of the Philadelphia college architect, will be among the drawings on display.

John Marshall, 'Vagabond de Luxe,' Will Recount Adventures Tomorrow

John Marshall, who styles himself a vagabond de luxe, will tell how he toured the world without spending a cent for transportation and less than a thousand dollars in all, when he begins his world tramp, he had a carefully selected wardrobe that contained everything from a pair of dungarees to a dinner jacket. Marshall has completed an unusual journey. All college students, he says, have hitch-hiked for several miles, but he knows of no one who has employed the same tactics to travel around the world. While he will complete his 125,000-mile world tour in which he has written the experiences of his tour, the book will be released this fall by one of the large publishing houses and will probably be called, "The Life of an Adventurer." While still an undergraduate at the University of Chicago, Marshall worked his way to Europe on a cattle boat. During this voyage in the summer of 1925, Robert D. Galbraith, of the English department, was also aboard. The two met and later traveled over much of Europe together.

Discontent with his change of policy, was described as his reason for bolting the party.

Thomson's maneuver came as a last-minute surprise to both parties. A member of the Campus faction, he joined the Locust Lane organization when the merger was effected, and was nominated for a Student Council berth. Discontent with his change of policy, was described as his reason for bolting the party. Thomson, on an independent ticket, Thomson claimed no organized support. His statement to the election committee consisted only of his own name for president, John D. Wilding for secretary, and Theodor V. Lewis for treasurer. Estimates of his strength varied widely, although both Independent and Locust Lane chiefs claimed that he would cut into their followings.

Free Hospital Endorsement With this one exception, the political picture developed according to predictions. Party chiefs admitted the probability of close contests, but claimed victory for their candidates. Five of the eight machines came out strong in favor of Free Hospital service.

The votes were estimated as evenly divided between the Independent and Locust Lane organizations before the new ticket entered the 1931 field. Earl J. Lindmuth, campaign manager for the standard bearer, claimed 110 votes for his party while Claude T. Haupt, Locust Lane champion, forecast a total of 50 for Paul A. Mitten, Edward L. Johnston, Thomson's campaign director, predicted his candidate would break into both McCloughlin and Mitten strongholds to pull up an imposing plurality. Figures from the Registrar's office and the various schools show approximately 700 qualified voters in the class.

26 Independent Groups. The 26 independent groups, the Independent vote is estimated at 225 up in the boys of figures in the Registrar's office. Wilding and Haupt both with about 50 vote, etc. also claimed by the Independents.

In houses listed for the Independent ticket, Alpha Chi Sigma, Sigma Phi Sigma, Alpha Phi Sigma, Alpha Sigma Phi, Alpha Tau Omega, Alpha Zeta Delta Chi, Delta Sigma Chi, Delta Tau Delta, Delta Theta Sigma, Epsilon Phi, Kappa Phi Kappa, Nu Phi Kappa Psi, Phi Kappa Tau, Phi Kappa Phi Sigma, Phi Epsilon, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Theta Upsilon, Theta Nu Epsilon, Theta Chi and Tau Epsilon.

These 26 candidates have pledged their support to the Locust Lane ticket. These houses command 250 votes. The Registrar's records show that the addition of the Penn State club belongs to control about 15 ballots, the machine strength is estimated at 271 votes. The track orders pledged to Mitten are Alpha Gamma Rho, Phi Epsilon, Phi Beta Upsilon, Kappa Sigma, Omega Chi Rho, Delta Sigma Phi, Alpha Chi Rho, Theta Xi, Sigma Tau Phi, Theta Kappa Phi, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Sigma Kappa, Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Chi, Acacia, Chi Upsilon.
