

Determined Nittany Gridders Seek Triumph Over Marshall Eleven

Sidelines

Coach John Maulbetsch, of the Marshall college eleven, was a half-back on Walter Camp's All-American team in 1914. He learned football under Fielding H. Yost, at the University of Michigan, which probably accounted for the variety of plays used by the West Virginia team last year against the Lions. With experienced ends and backs on his team, the Big Green mentor will probably use this method of attack tomorrow.

Higgins and Maulbetsch will renew an old rivalry on the gridiron. The Marshall coach was once in charge of football at Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College while the Nittany coach directed football at Washington university, St. Louis. In three games these two coaches were deadlocked, each having won once, and the other resulting in a 0-10-0 tie.

Lion coaches are expecting anything but an easy battle tomorrow. It is well known here that Marshall is pointing for the Penn State contest, while the Blue and White aggregation must look towards the Lafayette and Colgate encounters. In just this situation many upsets occur in the football world.

The visitor's line will average 186 pounds while that of the entire team reaches 179 pounds. This is considerably heavier than the Nittany team. McCoy, quarterback, tips the scales at a meagre 145 pounds while Bernard Rogers, left tackle, is the heaviest man on the squad, weighing 205 pounds.

Last year's author of the Campus Scout in the Pitt Weekly has predicted that the Panthers will overwhelm the Lions in the Thanksgiving Day, 22-to-0. He also forecasts Pitt to win every game on the 1930 schedule except the Nebraska contest. Last season the Scout predicted a 25-to-0 Pittsburgh victory in the Turkey Day encounter with State.

The Mid-West lost three of its leading coaches to the Pacific Coast this year. Dr. Clarence Spears left Minnesota for the University of Oregon, Phelan deserted his Purdue chairmans for University of Washington, and Tom Lieb left Kente Rockne's staff at Notre Dame to take the reins at Loyola, of Los Angeles.

Huntington Coach Remains Uncertain in Choice Of Starting Backfield Combination

Ohio Wesleyan to a three touchdown advantage, but in that game lost the services of a leading player, Raymond Hunter, right end. Seven other players were injured either in that game or during practice sessions the following week, for a crippled eleven barely defeated Morris Harvey last Saturday 7-to-0.

Maulbetsch, although fairly certain concerning his starting forward wall, is having difficulty in choosing a backfield combination for the Lion contest. Both Bradshaw and Stark, halfbacks, have been on the injured list and have not participated in the actual scrimmage work since the Ohio Wesleyan game. However, the Marshall coach is planning to start both of these men tomorrow.

McCoy, quarterback, and Fogg, fullback, will probably complete the Big Green backfield, although McEwen might start at quarter, sending McCoy to halfback, and Koran, and Howell, Maulbetsch has another quartet of backs, all with at least one year's experience on the squad, and any of which might be placed in the opening lineup if the regulars are not able to start.

In Wilson and Laird, the West Virginia team has two experienced wing-men. Weighing 175 and 187 pounds apiece, these two ends are hard men to stop after receiving a pass, and are the chief targets of Marshall's well developed aerial offense. Rogers will take care of one tackle both on the Thundering Herd eleven, and other Humphreys or Miller will get the other tackle assignment. Gaskill and Fletcher have been named for the guard positions, while Curtis Hamilton will start at center.

Evans performs well. Coach Bob Higgins has not held lengthy scrimmages during the past week, but has directed the first and second teams in fast fifteen minute work-outs, making frequent changes in both teams. Irwin, Yost, Batdorf, and Lovezey are the substitute backs who have been coming to the front in the practice sessions and will probably be used during a portion of tomorrow's game.

Evans has been performing extremely well during the past week and has almost completely recovered from the injury received last season in the Pitt game. To date he has played for only a few minutes in each game, but this week has participated in his full share of the daily scrimmages.

SOCCER ALL-STARS TO PLAY REGULARS

Pick-Up Eleven Meets Probable Lion Varsity in Practice Tilt Tomorrow

An all-star aggregation of soccer-men will meet the probable Nittany varsity in a practice tilt on the piece of land adjacent to the baseball diamond at 1:45 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

This pick-up eleven will be composed of five members of last year's championship team, Sergeant Ryan, former service star, four reserve men and Coach Bill Jeffrey.

Tully, second string goalie will defend the posts, against the Lion attack. Two All-Americans, Allan and Harvey will hold the fullback positions with a third experienced booter, Edgerton at center half. Shea or Brady will fill the right halfback, both and Frank Strimin at left halfback.

Coach Bill Jeffrey will play from the key position in the attack. Dick Marshall stationed at in-left, and Miller or Grammar at in-right together with Schwartz at outside right and either Battersby or Holmes at outside left complete the all-star attack.

All freshmen are eligible to participate. Fifteen events will be contested. These are the 100, 220, and 440 yard sprints, half mile, and 2-mile runs, 120-yard high and 220-yard low hurdles, running high, and broad jump, discus, javelin, and hammer throw, shot put and pole vault.

4 PLEBE ELEVENS HOLD SCRIMMAGES

Yearlings Begin Struggle For First Team Berths—Play 6 Practice Games

Four spirited yearling elevens, pitted against each other in six practice tilts, definitely began this week their long battle for positions in the freshman line-up.

Using the scrimmage to determine which men show promise, Coach Larry Conover will select the squad to face Syracuse in the first contest after the final play-off. Two games have been played, and four more are scheduled next week.

At the close of the second practice encounter, a score of the freshmen have already shown up on the field as potential plebe varsity material. Among the backfield men outstanding in early drills are Frankfield, Harper, E. C. Jackson, Jacobsen, Kiskey, Morrison, Parks, Pimstein, Snyder, Wantshouse and Wilson.

In a group of nine centers, Anderson, Betty and Booth seem to have the edge. Collins, McMullin and Wentzell have shown up well as guards, and McKee, Stark, Lyvodi and Klock are putting in good bids for tackle positions. Slusser, Rocky, Rathwell and Waughall have come to the fore as contenders for the wing berths.

Following the policy adopted in former years, the freshman grid mentor will not make any cut in his squad. Two weeks before each game twenty-five of the outstanding men will be selected to receive special training, and will constitute the freshman varsity squad. With additional uniforms ordered for the few who are not yet equipped, a group of approximately eighty yearling aspirants will be maintained.
