NITTANY GRIDMEN OPPOSE COLGATE TEAM TOMORROW

New Yorkers Outplay Michigan State, But Lose in Last Minute of Play

FRENCH, EDWARDS MAY NOT START FOR LIONS

Walter Terry, Maroon Backfield Acc. Receives Injury in Practice Game

Fighting to regain the prestige somewhat shadowed by last Saturday's games, Penn State and Colgate will battle on New Beaver field at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Visions of a Homecoming Day game between two elevens with spotless records were shattered when Michigan State scored a surprising 14-to-7 victory over the Maroon last week, and Lafayette held the undefeated Lions to a scoreless deadlock.

The Nittany coaches have not been misled by the fact that the New Yorkers suffered a slump in offensive power. Colgate gained twelve first downs to six for the Spartans, and both of the Westerner's scores were made on unusual plays.

Penn State's lineup is still uncertain, depending entirely upon the condition of several players who have been suffering from minor injuries.

Earle Edwards, veteran end, is another Lion who has not taken part in a scrimmage since the Lafayette encounter, and will probably view the game from the sidelines.

Judy Lasch and Captain Yutz Diederich are sure starters in the Blue and White backfield, while the fourth member of this quartet will either be Red Evans or Joe Miller, with the chances favoring the latter.

DEBATERS PLAN 8 FORENSIC MEETS

May Face Germans, Florida, Dayton, Pittsburgh, Lafayette, Carlton, American, W. and J.

The all-German debating team, representing the National Union of Students of Germany, will open the Penn State forensic season in Schwab auditorium Saturday, December 13.

In line with the practice of engaging in at least one international debate, the German team was scheduled for this year. The question for the debate is, "Resolved that the present policy of military preparedness be abandoned."

Debates with Washington and Jefferson college, Lafayette college, University of Florida, and Dayton university are being arranged.

That lack of many near-by high schools prevented a larger number of extension debates was pointed out by Prof. John H. Pizzell, debating coach and head of the department of public speaking.

Colgate Writer Describes Team Hopeful But Cautious

'Maroon' Sports Editor Cites Lack of Reserve Strength in Hamilton Squad

Further, they discount the fact that a sub-normal frosh delegation rose to the varsity squad this year. But the one reason why sports writers have overlooked these things is that in her first three games Colgate has played devastating football.

Captain Les Hart, triple threat halfback, is Kerr's running genius, and together with 190-pound Leonard Macaulis, fullback extraordinary, gives Colgate two deadly players on the offensive.

Separate programs have been completed by fraternities to entertain the returning graduates and former students so as not to conflict with the College exercises.

With the cheering section for the Penn State-Colgate football game tomorrow afternoon centralized in sections seventeen and eighteen of the West stands on New Beaver field, the first attempt at organized cheering will be made, announced Charles S. Harper '31, head cheer-leader, yesterday.

SENATE ARRANGES SOCIAL CALENDAR

Senior Ball Will Open Program Of All-College Functions On January 16

With an all-College function scheduled for every month during the second semester, the Senate announced the complete social calendar for the year last night.

The Senior Ball, coming shortly before the close of the first semester, will open the program of class dances on January 16. Traditionally the first all-College function, the Ball will be the only formal this term.

The sophomore Hop will be staged as the second class dance on March 6. The second annual Inter-fraternity Ball will be held on April 10 if the date set by the I. F. C. last week is approved by Student Board.

Chaucing the Penn State social season, the Junior Prom, the most colorful all-College function, will be the final formal dance of the year on May 8. All five affairs will be held in Recreation Hall, and the tickets will be handled through the Treasurers' office, removing all financial responsibility from student committees.

ENGLISH SINGERS APPEAR THURSDAY

London Vocalists To Present First Artists' Course Number in Schwab Auditorium

Bringing the melody of old English folk songs to Penn State, the Singers of London will open the second annual Artists' Course series in Schwab auditorium Thursday night.

Composed of six voices, the London musicians will present a program combining carols, madrigals, ballads, and other types of folk-song popular during the Elizabethan period.

Among the qualities which further make the six artists popular for critics are clear enunciation, and an ability to develop the slightest gradations of tone accurately. Music with elaborate and complex shades is said to be carefully represented by the London vocalists.

The English Singers will present the first of five concerts included in the Artists' Course, for which tickets are now on sale at the Treasurer's office.

Undergraduate Body To Parade at 10 O'clock This Morning Before Penn State's Distinguished Visitors

GOVERNOR JOHN S. FISHER WILL TRANSFER COLLEGE BUILDINGS TO TRUSTEE PRESIDENT IN AFTERNOON

Ten thousand visitors representing every section of Pennsylvania are gathered together at Penn State today to assist students and officials in celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the College.

These men and women include the Governor of the Commonwealth, president of the Board of Trustees, president of the Alumni Association, noted educators, alumni, alumnae, and friends of the College.

A parade composed of the entire student body opens the program at 10 o'clock this morning. This undergraduate body will march East across the Campus from the Armory, down the College road and West along College avenue to Atherton street.

Women students will assemble on the road between Grange Dormitory and the College hospital. Senior men will meet on the road west of the dormitory, and south of the intersection with College drive.

The juniors will form in line on the road west of the hospital and north of the intersection. All undergraduates not enrolled in R. O. T. C. will march in line immediately following the juniors.

Fisher to Speak College faculty members in academic robes will march in procession to the Convocation at 2:50 o'clock in Recreation Hall. At this assembly, Governor John S. Fisher will officially transfer the College buildings created by State funds to Colonel J. Franklin Shields '24, president of the Board of Trustees.

Governor Fisher, representing the Commonwealth of the State of Pennsylvania and the State Legislature, will address the combined assemblage of visitors, students and faculty members, on the development of Penn State.

President Ralph D. Hetzel will welcome the visitors as guests to the College. He will be followed by Charles Z. Kleiber, College architect, who will explain the building program. Colonel Shields will then address the Convocation.

Will Attend Luncheon The Convocation exercises will be broadcast direct from the Recreation Hall through the College radio station, WPSK.

A further entertainment, several hundred official guests will attend a luncheon at 1 o'clock in Old Main. This luncheon will be a College function.

Education Day, the opening day of the celebration, was set aside as that part of the program devoted to cooperation of one-day educational institutions with Pennsylvania's schools of higher learning.

Today will be devoted to public demonstrations of seventy-five years of progress as shown by the student of the College, faculty and College buildings. The alumni part in the exercises has been assigned to tomorrow, Alumni Homecoming Day.

President Reviews Causes Two reasons are seen by Dr. Hetzel for optimism in viewing the future of the College.

"If the State is to advance, as it certainly shall during the next twenty years, Penn State must prosper likewise," he declared.

"Ladies are a necessity if Pennsylvania is to advance consistently. To mould such men is the purpose of the College, and our facilities for teaching will have to expand to meet the larger demands which the Commonwealth will make upon us."

"The need for additional research assistance to Pennsylvania's industrial development will increase with enlargement of the state's activities. Likewise, extension instruction will probably receive impetus as more people who are unable to attend resident classes seek instruction."

Continuing on the theme of advanced education, Dr. Hetzel turned to the possibility of an alumni system of education, the President suggested a brief plan whereby graduates might aid to the fund of knowledge by continued contacts with the College after completion of regular courses.

"Although it is but one of many visions which college administrators hope to see realized, the proposal of seniority in prophesying the campus of tomorrow," Penn State's executive declared.

Continuing on the theme of advanced education, Dr. Hetzel turned to the possibility of an alumni system of education, the President suggested a brief plan whereby graduates might aid to the fund of knowledge by continued contacts with the College after completion of regular courses.
