IF THE SHOE FITS

Considerable controversy is still raging in certain camps regarding the pamphlet outlining seventy-five years of research here which was published by the College for the Anniversary Although this little booklet gives a misleading impression of the institution, there should be a complete understanding of its compilers' should be a complete understanding of its compilers' problems before pass ng censure on them.

Undoubtedly, the pamphilet seems to proclaim that Penn State is still a "cow college" Judging by the fact that seven pages of the entire twenty are devoted to existential research, one might well be inclined to consider this a farm school. Yet several other branches of learning cyst here.

The scholarly report of agricultural problems is followed by biref and incomplete outlines of the work of the other schools. The Schools of Mineral Industries, Chemistry and Physics, and Engineering combined do not receive as much space as their brother on the hill. Then when it comes to the "cultural" sude, the aspect is even darker. The Education school icceives a little over a page in which to icpoit its advances, while the School of Liberal Arts does not receive e-en that much space As a result there are many omissions. Some of the out-standing works of several members of the latter school completely neglected. This naturally gives on in-inplete picture of the work carried on at the College Oi course it is true that the work of agricultura the conies it is the that the work of agricultural to the men may be more tangible than the work of some 5, the others. Also, this school may have more funds awable. But, on the other hand, does that serve to raise the tanding of the College any more than research work in the social sciences of some other field? While credit should be given to the Agriculture school for its work and entiusism, and cognizance should be taken of the fact that it has been in existence longer than the rest, the other schools also deserve their proportionate share of recognition

However, like all pictures, perhaps there are two sides to this one. The Agriculture school must be commended for its progressive policy in putting its work before the public. Some of its aggressiveness might well be adopted with success by the others. To the disinterested observer it would appear that the Liberal Arts. school and its retiring brothers are at times wasteful of their opportunities. Instead of taking advantage of the chance to give their work publicity, it appears that they sit silently back and wait for others to do it

It some of the schools did not receive then just it ward in the booklet, it can be taken as a lesson in the value of "blowing one's own hoin" when the auspicious moment arrives.

TOO MANY SALESMEN

One or two established salesmen displaying wares weekly in fiateinity club iooms may be tolerated, even we'comed by the members However, when six or more peddlers appear throughout the week selling everything from punchboards to parasols, it gets thesome

Interfraternity Council could eliminate much of this by establishing a service similar to the one used by municipal Chambers of Commerce Before a salesman could gain access to a fraternity house he should be required to present a certificate issued by a Council committes vouching for his reliability.

ASLEEP

It may be going too far to say that a large per centage of Penn State students did not know that Tuesday was Election Day. It wouldn't be so far-fetched to state that many still do not know the names of the winners. It is a certainty that the Penn State stuthe winners. It is a certainty that the Pedent is sadly ignorant of current events.

The isolation of the Nittany campus is a good talking point. But it should not be taken so literally that the student loses all touch with outside activities. A few minutes devoted daily to a good magazine or newspaper will keep the student informed of current events necessary for intelligent conversation

When little Jimmy was three years old he delighted in picking up hits of string and tin cans to take home to Mother. When Jimmy came to College he retained these cute habits, collecting silverware and sugar bowls these duct makes, concerning fraterinity brothers. Unfortu-nately for the restaurants, they can't apply switches to the numerous Jimmies like Mother did when they pulled these babyish tricks at home

THE LION'S DEN

- BY DANIEL

Scene in the Movies.

The other night Daniel was sitting in the movies and happened to spy a man with just a fringe of han skirting his bald pate a few 10% ahead. In about the middle of the show the nearly-denuded gentleman began to scratch his outer fringe of han,

Apparently someone else also noticed this, because an unknown wise-cracker in the row behind immediately piped out, "Hey, mister, chase him out ir the open and we'll get him for you"

SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE LEASES MITCHELL FARM

The School of Agriculture, once more pressed for 100m to expand, har leased the farm of Judge II Walter Mitchell, an ex-president of the Penn State Bonnd of Trustees. This land, 100 acres, located just adjacent to the College property on the north side, was selected for its cervenence and nearness to College facilities.

Leased by the College from 1910 until 1929, the farm was held as a
