ARCHITECTS SPEAK BEFORE ENGINEERS

Cornell, Minnesota Men Substitute For Refrigeration Expert At Senior Lecture

That everyone should develop his imaginative powers in order that he may thoroughly understand problems before attacking them was the advice presented by Mr. Roy C. Jones, professor of architecture at the University of Minnesota, when he addressed senior engineers on "Creative Imagination" in the Chemistry amphitheatre Friday afternoon. Mr. Frank H. Bosworth, professor of architecture at Cornell university, talked on the same subject.

When Crosby Field, New York consulting engineer on refrigeration, failed to appear for his scheduled address, Professors Jones, and Bosworth, who were here to investigate conditions in the school of architecture for a report to the Carnegie foundation, consented to deliver the lecture.

The investigation which these men are conducting is nation-wide. It began last September, and will probably continue for a year.

The engineering lecture was the fourth of a series of talks presented every Friday afternoon to senior engineers. Dean Robert L. Sackett of the School of Engineering presented the first and third discussions. The second was an address on "Engineering, a Step in the Administration of Justice" delivered by Judge M. Ward Fleming of the Centre County court.

STEDLE, CHEDSEY SPEAK AT BARNESBORO MINING MEETING

Dean Edward Stedle and Prof. William R. Chedsey of the Mineral Industries school attended the annual meeting of the Barnesboro Mining Institute at Barnesboro, last Saturday. The Institute discussed various problems affecting central Pennsylvania coal regions.

Students Favor R. O. T. C.; Verbal Questionnaire Shows

50 Percent Enrolled in Basic Course Answer Query Affirmatively—Upperclassmen Advise Increased Credits

That 50 per cent of the students enrolled in basic courses would have taken R. O. T. C. if the course had been optional at the beginning of the freshman year was the result of a verbal survey completed by the Department of Military Science and Tactics last week. Seventy-two per cent of the advanced students replied to a similar question in the affirmative.

In connection with a study being made by the War department to secure recommendations for increasing the morale and efficiency of college units, a questionnaire was submitted to the advanced students to secure their suggestions.

To the specific question concerning credit 71 advanced students answered that insufficient credit was being given in the basic course while 30 advocated no change. Credit in the advanced courses was considered satisfactory by 74, unsatisfactory by 26. Reason for this is given in that 84 officers stated credit was not a factor in their continuing R. O. T. C. work.

In regard to compulsory training for the first two years 62 student officers were opposed to the system while 48 favored the required feature. That credit should be given for work in the National Guard, C. M. T. C. and regular army was the opinion of 86 advanced students while 15 were opposed to the plan.

The suggestion of making the summer camp elective was considered unfavorable by 73, while 98 upheld that the camp was a worthwhile feature.

WARNOCK ADVISES GREEK ACTIVITIES

Dean of Men Suggests 'Balanced Ratio'—Praises Fraternities For Recent Behavior

Congratulating the fraternities on their "quite creditable" conduct over their recent house-party week-end, Dean of Men Arthur R. Warnock in a letter sent out Friday asked chapter presidents to urge members of their fraternity to engage in some suitable activity for the coming winter season. In his letter Dean Warnock stated that a rule ought to be made for dealing with those who go to other fraternity parties to do things which are not permissible in their own houses. He declared that a solution to this problem will require joint action of all the fraternities.

A "balanced ratio" of activities for each chapter was suggested by the Dean who added further that stress on extra-curricular activities tended toward an unequal balance. Concluding his letter he suggested minor campus activities such as professional societies, church organizations, and lecture and discussion groups.

Faculty Selections Oppose Walpole's Literary Choices

English Professors Agree With Only 2 of 6 World's Best Books in Considering Novelist's Assertion

If all the books in the world were to be destroyed except a half dozen what six would you desire most to save? This was a question asked of four members of the faculty of the English department yesterday. Hugh Walpole, noted English novelist, declared in a recent address at King's college that there are only six books in the world worthy of being called literature. In his opinion these are Tolstoy's "War and Peace," Homer's "Iliad," "Epic and Pelegu dice" by Jane Austen, the first volume of Keats' poetry, "Arabia Deserta" by Doughty, and Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales."

Prof. A. Howry Espenshade, head of the English composition department, agreed with Walpole only in the choice of "Canterbury Tales" and Homer's "Iliad."

"Personally, I consider Virgil's 'Aeneid' the most influential book in literature, excepting, of course, the Bible," said Professor Espenshade.

and these two together with the works of Shakespeare and Cervantes, "Don Quixote" would be included in my six."

PRESIDENT HETZEL RELEASES CAMPUS POLICE REVISIONS

Corps To Safeguard Physical Property, Aid Visitors, Regulate Traffic

COLLEGE WILL NOT USE PATROLS FOR DANCES

Administration Extends Parking Privileges on Roadways Following Survey

Revised regulations affecting the power of the campus police patrol as well as College traffic rules were released by President Ralph D. Hetzel in an administrative letter last week.

The first duties of the campus patrol in the future, according to the President's message, shall be to safeguard the physical property of the College from fire, theft, unauthorized use, and destructive and abusive actions. Correction of hazards to the well-being of those using College property, and the administration of traffic rules are also assigned to the patrol. They shall also render courteous aid to Penn State's visitors.

In assigning these duties, the President's letter cited four restrictions to the patrol's jurisdiction.

Will Not Patrol Dances "The campus patrol shall have no responsibility for patrol duty under any personal conduct on the campus, except in cases of violation of physical property and vehicular traffic regulations designated," the message reads.

"In accord with this ruling, no member of the campus patrol shall be assigned to any duty at athletic events, social functions, entertainments or convocations, and shall not appear in uniform or any such occasions, except in pursuit of regular line of duty."

"The campus patrol shall not be used in any manner in the enforcement of College disciplinary regulations in dormitories or other student residences on the campus."

"The responsibility of the campus patrol shall be exercised only within the boundaries of the College lands. As a safeguard against theft, the letter explains, a strict watch will be kept on all persons loitering in or around buildings when they are not in normal use. Unoccupied buildings will be locked.

A study of traffic conditions on the campus has revealed that roadside space is sufficient for short parking only, according to the President's message. New regulations, reserving this area for those who wish to park for brief periods, extend this privilege to members of the administrative and academic staff.

A list of special parking areas, compiled after a study of the available space and the possibility of increasing the present limits, designates seven areas for parking on the campus. In addition, parking will be permitted in the future along five main campus highways upon one side of the thoroughfare.
