

MIT TOURNAMENT RING REGULATIONS

with the open glove, wrestling or roughing at the ropes, going down without being hit, striking deliberately over the kidneys, and the use of abusive or insulting language.

Disqualifications

In addition, the failure to obey the referee, or any physical actions which may injure a contestant, except by fair sportsmanlike boxing, shall also be judged as fouls. Coaching, or words of advice or encouragement from spectators, or applause, may also be classed as fouls if the referee decides that the occasion warrants it.

(The referee will announce, or cause to be announced that no applause or demonstrations of any kind be allowed during the progress of the round, calling attention to the provisions in the preceding rule.)

It is recommended by the rules that the referee shall immediately disqualify a contestant who is guilty of a deliberate and willful foul, and award the decision to his opponent. It is also recommended that a referee shall not give more than one warning for a foul, which although committed unintentionally, is likely to incapacitate an opponent, and shall disqualify the offender without warning in case of actual injury. In cases of minor fouls, such as hitting with open glove, clinching, or prolonging the contest after a fair warning has been given by the referee, he shall have the option of awarding the decision to the opponent.

Termination of Round

A contestant shall be deemed "down" when any part of his body other than his feet is on the ring floor, when he is hanging helplessly over the ropes, and when he is rising from a "down" position. A contestant may go down through accident or weakness, but must rise instantly unless sent down by a blow, in which case he may remain down until the count of "nine" without being disqualified.

(A boxer hanging on the ropes is not officially "down" until so pronounced by the referee, who can either stop the bout, or count the boxer out on the ropes or floor.)

When a contestant is "down," his opponent shall retire out of striking distance, and shall not resume boxing until ordered to do so by the referee. The round and bout shall be terminated when a "down" contestant fails to resume boxing at the expiration of ten seconds.

In the event of any question arising not provided for in the rules, the referee shall have the full power to decide such questions, and his decisions shall be final.
