

INTRAMURAL GROUPS BEGIN TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Pi Kappa Alpha Defeats Theta Chi In First Match of Contest

Because of inclement weather, only one match of the first round in the intramural tennis tournament was played last week in which Pi Kappa Alpha defeated Theta Chi, 5-1.

Thirty-five teams, including two non-fraternity groups, State Club, and Watts hall have enrolled. At least four men constitute a team, and four singles and two doubles matches are played. A loving cup will be awarded to the winning unit.

FROM COMMITTEE TO AWARD TICKETS AS POSTER PRIZES

Complimentary tickets to the Junior Prom will be awarded to the winners of first and second places in the Prom poster contest. The posters should be submitted to Harry S. Ruthrauff '31, Pi Kappa Alpha house, before noon Thursday.

The entries will be judged by several professors in the fine arts department, and should include the price per couple, the date, and the names of both orchestras playing at the dance.

WILL OBSERVE EGG WEEK

National Egg Week will be observed by the Poultry club beginning Friday at the College with three radio programs to be broadcast over College radio station WPSC, and with an egg hunt on the Campus for the children of the town. Broadcasting facilities may be extended for the occasion. Robert S. Parks, president of the club, is planning a number of exhibits.

Agriculture Students Enter Varied Occupations, Alumni Survey Shows

That relatively a large portion of graduates from the School of Agriculture enter the teaching profession or take farm managerial positions was shown by a survey of 845 alumni conducted recently.

The largest number of answers from former students to the School revealed that they are following secondary or high school teaching while the second greatest group avowed their work in farming or farm management. The former occupation claims 122 graduates while the latter interests 116.

The incomplete statistics also revealed that eighty-eight were engaged in college teaching and research, eighty-seven in agricultural extension work, fifty-seven in forestry work, and thirty-eight in graduate study.

Other outstanding agricultural vocations employing former students are:

many products manufacture with thirty-five, landscape architecture with thirty-three, and the United States and the Pennsylvania Departments of Agriculture with thirty men. Fruit and vegetable inspectors, and agricultural engineers each numbered eight among the four-year agriculture graduates.

Of those failing to continue in agrarian lines, there are forty-two salesmen, twenty-two insurance men, sixteen sales directors, sixteen commercial workers, and nine ministers. The publications field attracted seven graduates, while six men entered business either as merchants or florists.

Among agricultural graduates now following diverse occupations are listed five dentists, five Y. M. C. A. workers, four store managers, four clerks, three fertilizer agents, three garage owners, three physicians, and three builders.

DRS FORBES, NOLL, NIXON COMPETE FOR $5000 PRIZE

Three members of the School of Agriculture faculty have been nominated for the $5000 prize awarded annually by Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas to an American who has rendered distinguished service to the agriculture of the United States.

Dr. Ernest B. Forbes, director of the institute of animal nutrition, Dr. Charles F. Noll, professor of experimental agronomy and superintendent of the college farms, and Dr. Ernest L. Nixon, professor of plant pathology, are nominees from the College.

Veteran Janitor Claims 33 Years Of Service Here

Pausing in his task of sweeping down the several flights of stairs in the Agricultural building, H. W. Kerstetter, the aged janitor, leaned back against the wall and steadied himself partly with the long-handled, wide push-broom he had been using. He must have been feeling particularly talkative because it is very seldom that he stops to speak with students.

There was something rather appealing about the old man as he stood there gazing down at the floor in front of him. The expression on his face suggested remembrance thinking. As he spoke, his words came in short jerky syllables.

"Yes, sir," he said slowly, "I have been working in this building twenty-seven years. Thirty-three years I've worked for this institution. That's a long time for a man to stay at one job."

"But," he continued, "the way I feel is this—I if I could do better myself I would leave, but all these years I have felt that this was the best job I could have. Professors and students have told me different times that this is the neatest building on the campus. I like to do my work well."

"Just the other day, a man came in and when he saw me, he hurried over and nearly shook my head off greeting me. He said, 'Are you here yet? Why I graduated twenty years ago, and you were here then.' I didn't remember him, but it made me feel good that he knew me after that long time."
