First Interpretative Talk

The first of a series of interpretative recitals by Herbeit Koepp-Baker of the public speaking division will be broadcast during the regular Sunday afternoon program of WPSC, College radio station, beginning at 4 o'clock Sunday.

Mt. Koepp-Baker has travelled several seasons on lyeeum and chautuaque circuits in this country, and has appeared in a number of individual recital programs in universities in the middle and far west. As material for his interpretations, he uses full length and one act plays, and classic and popular poetry and piose.

Among the plays in which Mt. Koepp-Baker has appeared as diamatic interpreter are, "David Garrick," "The Rivals," "The Piper," "The Imaginary Invalid," and "Wisdom Teeth" Pollowing requests from persons who have heard his interpretation of verse from T. A. Daly, Mr. Koepp-Baker, who is director of WPSC programs, will include some of these in his series.

To Rlease City Crowds

A slow game which is played more as a sneetacle for city crowds than for the physical benefit of the players is the characterization of American college football given by Stuart Chaig and John Needham, English Universities representatives, who debated here last night.

"English university athleties are fun for the benefit of the students and are not a spectacle for the public," said Craig, who was graduated recently from the University Collegs, Nottingham "There is rarely any Cambridge annual match" "American football is too slow," he said. "Onecriming the fracternity system in England because it tends to split in the public," said Craig, who was graduated recently from the University Collegs, Nottingham "There is rarely any "We object to the stoppages To ask for time out because you are lard messed and to send a new man into the game is contrary to good spotsmanship In England we use the same team for the whole game, (Continued on page two)

Reference Division Front Entrance-Open Exhibit Series

Immediate changes in scope and facilities of the Carnegie library portent of the Carnegie library portent of the Carnegie library centering all the varied interests and litrary work of the campus, according to Willard P. Lewis, new College librarian.

The reference work will be moved directly to rooms if the front of the building where newspapers are now kept, providing greater accessibility and more light. Newspapers and periodicals will be placed in the basement of the building as soon as new lighting arrangements are completed. Mr. Lewis said.

A "browsing" room with open stacks will be set up in the former reference room. Here students may read light books and periodicals of interest at leisure, marking the first step in centering all the reading interests of the campus in the library, Mr. Lewis said.

To Simplify 'System

All the library facilities on the campus must be centralized at the College library, according to Mr. Lewis. Those in charge of the various school reference and reading librares alleady have been galled to gether in order to regamize all library facilities, he Zaw Interests of the various school and departments will be "brought to the attention of the library by an advision" committee made up of members appointed from each school to meet informed the purchases of new or old books by turned in to the librarian. Mr. Lewis urged that any suggestions for purchases of new or old books by turned in to the librarian Mr. Lewis said, while at the same time a new system of simplified borrowing procedure is being worked out of the same difficulty in the reserve books in a basement office so that only stack books will by largely eliminated by the placing of all reserve books in a basement office so that only stack books will by taken from the main deck, Mr. Lewis said. The same difficulty in the reserve room is to be alleviated by the laceng of all reserve books in a basement office so that only stack for whort periods during the day instead of its being required that they remain in the building.
