THE PROFESSORIAL GRAB-BAG

Many college graduates, recalling the worthwhile factors in their education, have named professors rather than courses as important in moulding their lives as students.

Why should any college professor be disinclined to admit what he teaches, to accept the fact that he will be judged in part by the popularity of his courses? Authors sign their names to books on all subjects.

If there are a few teachers who are either so deeply lulled as to regard the classroom as routine, or so ill-adapted as to be disliked, then let them be unclocked. It is certain that they are few.

In the long run, theories in a textbook mean little. Classes with poor instructors mean less. Men will be guided always by a few great teachers who can transmit that spark of vitality which stimulates their students to achievement.

In a short time Librarian Lewis has quickly and efficiently accomplished a remarkable number of things and has certainly made the best possible use of the resources available.

FOOTBALL RULE CHANGES

Just a year ago the chairman of the football rules committee in his annual report indicated that the work of that committee had been completed.

A few casualties during a football season in past years have always stirred up a great deal of criticism. The great American game annually goes over the coals by critics who believe it unnecessarily brutal.

Many of the fatalities during the past season have resulted from injuries to players in the kick-off play. Consequently, many changes have been suggested which will either eliminate this phase of the game altogether, or materially change it so that a ban can be placed on the flying wedge offense formation used by many teams this year.

Although elimination of the kickoff would take away an exciting feature of the game, we believe that such a change could be made without any drastic results by merely placing the ball in play from close formation on a designated yard line.

CAMPUSEER

BY HIMSELF

Prof. Elton D. Walker teaches both Engineering Law and Hydraulics. He recently entertained one of his hydraulics classes by lecturing and asking questions on Law. Some of his students take both courses; they did all the answering and maintained the comedy for fifteen minutes before the professor got his bearings and discovered that he was teaching the wrong subject.

We hear that a lot of people are bashful about turning in activities cards to La Vie because they haven't any activities. Those people aren't in half as bad a situation as we are. We have a flock of activities and we're embarrassed about admitting it. It's a big problem. Should we let it be known that we are a first assistant manager? It means that we went out the gym, carried water buckets, ran errands and acted as janitor, nurse maid, and manservant to a bunch of athletes.

We made a hat too. But that reminds us that a fraternity brother chiselled us into the society, that we wrote a check, and then wore the hat around the campus and felt a good deal bigger than we now realize we are. And honoraries. All those bucks wasted. Must we remind ourselves about it in the future? Not us. We're not going to admit any such activities. We're going to say that we didn't do a thing just went to college.

If they're going to ask professors to contribute part of their salaries to the unemployed we've got a suggestion to make. We're all for presenting a similar proposition to the undergraduates who collect salaries. We've seen a couple of business managers, class presidents, Junior Prom managers, and other racketeers riding around in cars, and they look pretty prosperous to us. We understand that these publication boys make quite a little money, too, and we don't see why they shouldn't be assessed. That is, starting next year.

We have received several complaints from fellows going around with co-eds. It's becoming expensive, they say. The girls aren't getting enough to eat at Mac Hall, and the boys have to feed them. From what we gather, a week of Mac Hall lunches includes something like the following, from Sunday to Saturday: prunes, asparagus on soggy toast, pines, mashed potatoes, pines, asparagus on soggy toast, and pines. It isn't quite enough, and the boys find that they have to supply the rest. What with the depression and all, they can't afford it, and unless something is done some pretty fine friendships are going to crack up.

When one of Mr. Butt's classrooms became stuffy the other day he suggested to a student at the rear, "Let's have some air at that end of the room."

About Town & Campus: Anne Buehler, who looks lonely sometimes, has been trying to chisel people's names into Flath's Mug & Jester colyum. . . That was pretty good punch they hid in the kitchen at the Sigma Nu dance. . . Many a young pledge and his blind date enjoyed that affair, and so did the football team. . . Members of the local stockingless cult include Sunny Merrill, Bobbe Vincent, and Dot Johnston. Now that it's getting cold almost everyone has stopped wearing black and white shoes. . . Howard Elliston, the former portrait painter, & Marion Terwilliger, who visits her Alma Mater very frequently.

We know why men smoke PIPES

WOMEN don't smoke pipes. They're not the style for women. But pipes are the style for men, and more than that, a pipe and good tobacco gives a man greater smoking pleasure than tobacco in any other form.

In 42 out of 54 American colleges and universities Edgeworth is the favorite pipe tobacco. Cool slow-burning burleys give this fine tobacco exactly the character that college men like best of all.

Try a tin of Edgeworth yourself! You can buy Edgeworth wherever good tobacco is sold. Or if you prefer, you can get a special sample packet free: write to Larus & Bro. Co., 105 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va., and ask for it.

EDGEWORTH SMOKING TOBACCO

Edgeworth is a blend of fine old burleys, with its natural flavor enhanced by Edgeworth's distinctive and exclusive elevation process. Buy Edgeworth anywhere in two forms—Edgeworth Ready Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes, 1 1/2 pound package to $1.50 pound humid tin.

issue may do so by presenting their receipts at the Bell office on the third floor of Old Main this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon. After that time copies will be distributed at the Athletic Store.
