Coach Heimann's recent statement to the papers that the gentle art of fowl shooting was on the decline was given ample justification when the Lions converted only nine out of their nineteen chances into scores Saturday night.

When Louis, of Chicago's wrestling team, opens the mat season here against Roy Maize, he will have painful memories of a battle with that gentleman last year. The gangster cat, grappler emerged from the contest with a broken arm.

While Charlie Spindel's men have been getting into shape to twist their opponents out of time, two of said opponents have been hitting the mat in the first meets of their schedule. Princeton succeeded in defeating their neighbors from Rutgers, but Syracuse started out with a loss to Lehigh.

Sports writers all over the country are hailing Steve Hamas, Penn State grad who is getting up in the heavyweight kingdom. Alfie Wolff, also a State man, had been looked upon as a better boxer than Steve, but Alfie found the charms of a fiancée more attractive than the prize ring.

The drastic rulings of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission had their first harmful effect when Lafayette chose to cancel its wrestling meet with Ursinus rather than go through the rigamarole required by the Commission.

Although the Easton school was conducting the match without benefit of gate receipts, the laws require the posting of a $5,000 bond and the presence of a representative of the commission to make sure the wrestlers weren't making too much money. Temple recently chose the same alternative, in order to avoid red tape.

Army's basketball team got away to a flying start by chalking up wins against McGill and Johns Hopkins.

Last year's freshman quintet, although visibly inferior to the varsity, held the Western Maryland passes on even terms during the few minutes that they were on the floor, each team scoring three points. The team work of the sophomores gave promise that there would be little to worry about for the next two years if all remain in school.

Courtmen Open Season in 47-21 Victory Over Terrors

Davis, McMin Lead in Scoring Attack on Maryland Foe

By SIDNEY H. BENJAMIN '33

One day last fall, Lehigh's football team donned white uniforms instead of their traditional brown ones and showed their followers a complete reversal of form.

Penn State's basketball team tried much the same thing Saturday night and romped away to their first opening game victory in three years, defeating the Green Terrors of Western Maryland by a quite decisive 47-to-21 score. Besides looking flashy in their new white uniforms, the Lions displayed a fast passing game, a fair defense, and a brand new guard by the name of Ed McMinn.

This man McMinn, who was spending his time with the reserves while Penn State was losing basketball games last year, looks like a find. His wheeling and pivoting are on a par with most of that yet seen in Recreation hall, and he has a canny eye for the basket, although his many sparkling pass-off plays stamp him a good team-worker. He and Bub Davis, who seems speedier and more aggressive than last year, had the crowd roaring its approval repeatedly.

Substitutes Sophomores. True to his word, Dutch Hermann substituted his team of sophomores hopefuls after the varsity had amassed a safe 13-to-18 advantage, and, while it may have been nervousness or it may have been the bad effect of the old blue uniforms, the youngsters were none too impressive. They succeeded in holding their tired opponents on even terms, but gave way before the end of the game to still another team of varsity reserves.

Except for a dangerous Terror rally near the end of the first half, the Lions' early advantage was never threatened. They showed their best offense at the beginning of the second half when they ran up 18 points.

Paper Seeks Opinions On School Court Tilt

Feeling that there is a widespread desire throughout the State to have the annual interscholastic basketball tournament return here, the COLLEGIAN is sounding out sentiment on the matter among newspaper editors of cities in the different sections of Pennsylvania.

The results of this survey will be published shortly together with opinions of athletic officials here. The play-offs were held here annually until 1928, when the Eastern Interscholastic boxing tournament caused a conflict in dates. Since then, they have alternated between points in the eastern and western parts of the State.
