COLLEGE BOXING ON TRIAL

While Penn State boxers are fighting the best college mittmen in the nation today and tomorrow a great responsibility rests upon their husky shoulders.

As hosts to college athletes from coast to coast Penn State's student body has a duty to perform just as important in its way as the mission of the Lion battlers of the squared arena.

Officials of the tournament, heeding the pleas of Director Hugo Bezdek, sacrificed large financial returns in order to put the tournament within a college atmosphere.

It should not be necessary to urge friendly hospitality towards visitors on the campus during this festive weekend. But certainly a very special effort should be made by students to make the hundreds of visitors feel at home.

CAMPUS MARTYR NO. 1492

The expulsion of the Columbia Spectator editor for his continued criticisms of campus conditions has stirred up a tremendous and rather unfortunate furor about the freedom of the underground press.

Any college editor will defend the freedom of the collegiate press, and its right to liberty; but the bogey of a college administrative censorship is, in this College, and we believe in most similar institutions, the product of silly talk.

It is hard to sympathize, therefore, with this new variety of campus journalism. Every item of evidence points to his continued abuse of college officials and institutions with little or no basis in fact.

POLITICAL MAY QUEENS

On what basis should the May Queen and her attendant be chosen? Should the position of May Queen be considered the seventh senior women's honor, together with that of bow girl, slipper girl, or fan girl?

Formerly a pretty girl who lacked some of the superfluous requirements was eliminated as a candidate because a co-ed has broken some minor W. S. G. A. rule.

May Day is the one fete of the College which depends on the beauty of its participants for its success. The public judges women students by their representatives in this ceremony.

OLD MANIA

Second only to Dr. Peters' discovery that moving pictures are potent forces in the maintenance of our national virtue is the following startling revelation, unearthed by the diligent researchers of the National Foot Health Committee, 460 West 34th St., New York City.

DELAWARE, OHIO, April 8, (Special)—Although reported prevalent among both men and women students in colleges and universities throughout the country, a survey just completed shows that students in northern schools have a smaller percentage of cases of ringworm of the toes and feet than students in Southern colleges, according to an article in the Ohio Wesleyan Transcript published by students of Ohio Wesleyan University.

The survey, made through college newspapers, showed more cases among men students than among co-eds, and that the disease is caused by a germ found most commonly on the floors of locker and bath rooms.

Students at Ohio Wesleyan University, the survey reported, have fewer cases than any other school reporting, the number of cases here being less than 2% of the student enrollment, as compared with a national average of approximately 7%.

Eighteen southern schools reported an average of 60% while in sixteen northern schools the average was only 7%. Despite this lead by southern schools, one Iowa school reported 90% of its students infected, the highest in the country.

It is just such revolutionary discoveries as this which serve to jar us rudely from our usual offbeat complacency and smugness, and stimulate us into wondering if all is as well as it might be.

It is indeed high time that we become aware of our deplorable laxity in certain lines, and set about to remedy the situation. Why should we content ourselves with a miserable 61%, when by the simple expedient of marching the student body through the shower room in Rec Hall in their bare feet it is probable that we could attain a 60% or even 70% rating?

THE MANIAC

The charming study in the national dialect comes to our alert ear from a physics student who takes a course with Dr. Ham of that dept.

With the whole campus rocked by the May Queen controversy, it came as a relief to us to learn that out in Ohio students threatened to name a dog for the respected position.
