College Catalogue Pictures Campus of 50 Years Ago

Visions of a Penn State campus, on which Old Main—the original structure—contained all the class rooms, the laboratories, the library and chapels, in addition to numerous dormitories, are conjured up by the College catalog for the year 1881-82.

The calendar, as it was called, is a sixteen-page pamphlet three by five and a quarter inches. "James A. McKee, M. A., Acting President," heads the faculty list, which includes twelve other men and two women. Miss Anne M. Cooper, B. S., is designated "Lady Principal," and Miss Hattie I. Foster, "Instructor in Music."

After describing the aims and purposes of the College, the calendar tells something of the campus. The main building, it says, "contains the public rooms, such as chapel, library, cabinets, laboratories, class-rooms and social halls, and a large number of dormitories. . . . The other buildings are professors' houses, barns, engine houses, etc."

Declaring that the College provided a "bedstead, mattress, washstand, and chair for each student who roomed in the building," the catalog said that all other articles, "including bedding, wash-bowl, pitcher, mirror, lamp, etc.," should be furnished by the student.

Although the College provided no boarding facilities at that time, students were able to secure meals at about half present rates, the bulletin adds. "The College does not maintain a 'boarding-hall' the catalog explains, and most students depend on the boarding-houses in the vicinity, the regular charge being $3 per week. The College offers special facilities to those who board themselves singly, and also to the College Boarding Club, which supplies its members, now numbering about twenty, with good boarding at about $2 per week."

All students were required to take military training three times a week, but seniors and juniors had to attend only half the number of classes assigned for members of the lower classes during the year. The uniform, the catalog states, "is of cadet gray."

cloth and of a standard pattern." College officials who regard as a new development the quarter system, in which the academic year is divided into three parts instead of into two semesters, should refer to the catalog of fifty years ago. The 1881-82 calendar was divided into a fall session of sixteen weeks and winter and spring sessions of twelve weeks each.

The College maintained a preparatory course for students coming from districts where there were no "advanced schools." In this department as well as in the first two years of college work proper, the student might elect a course in general science or one in the classics.

Speaking of the college courses, the pamphlet says: "That in General Science, probably the most popular of all college courses, embraces German and French, mathematics, and a fair outline of the natural and metaphysical sciences. The Classical combines with the essentials of the old, time-honored 'college course' a large amount of the scientific knowledge and practical training which that course formerly lacked."

At the end of his sophomore year the student might continue in the chosen course or enter one of four "technical" courses. The curricula thus designated were agriculture, natural history, chemistry and physics, and civil engineering.

The predecessor of the winter short courses in agriculture given by the College is seen in the Farmers' Institute of 1882. This was a series of lectures given over a period of ten days in January.

PETTY ADDRESSES CHAPEL AUDIENCE

Pittsburgh Pastor Talks on 'Wants Versus Needs' at Services in Schwab Auditorium

Speaking on "Wants Versus Needs," Dr. C. Wallace Petty, pastor of the First Baptist church, Pittsburgh, addressed the chapel audience Sunday morning.

"The numerous wants of human being are not the natural expression of their needs," Dr. Petty said. "We want everything, and yet need only a few things."

"Bread is more than a need, it is a right," he said. "Only when America put personality above government and man above machines will it be able to give citizens their rightful bread," the chapel speaker said.

"The depression has exploded the time-honored myth of the great and inflexible American business man. What we now need are political and economic leaders who know nothing and understand everything instead of knowing everything and understanding nothing," Dr. Petty said.

OIL POWER CONFERENCE TO BEGIN HERE JUNE 8

Industrial Delegates Will Convene At College for Fourth Time

The National Oil and Gas Power meeting will be held here from June 8 to 11, according to an announcement by Dean Robert L. Sackett, of the Engineering School.

With the major industries interested in Diesel engines represented at the meeting, this will be the fourth time in five years that the oil power conference has been here, Dean Sackett said.

Many contributions to these industries in regard to Diesel engine research have been made by the engineering experiment station, he added. Investigators here have centered their study on fuel injection and injection systems.

WATTS, BORLAND GIVE TALKS

Dean Ralph L. Watts of the School of Agriculture and Professor Andrew A. Borland of the department of dairy husbandry were speakers at a meeting of dairymen sponsored by a local creamery concern in the Armory last Thursday night. Music by the sophomore band and a comedy reel was also part of the program, which was attended by more than 1,200 people.

'Don't Let Fickle Mother Nature Fool You,' College Doctors Warn

With fickle Mother Nature in one of her most changeable moods—now scorching rays of the mid-spring sun and now enveloping it in a blanket of post-winter snow, the College physicians warn the students against thoughtless lack of proper precautions against the attendant ills brought on by the irregular weather.

"Many students, after virtually hibernating throughout the winter beneath excessive arrays of garments, venture forth at the first sign of fair weather in clothing unfit for proper protection against the climate," declared the doctors. "Consequently they lower the vitality of their bodies. Dress should be regulated with the changes in temperature instead of according to the season of the year."

With the advent of mid spring also comes the inherent desire for communion with nature when students are want to tramp in the nearby mountains heedlessly coming in contact with poison ivy and other poisonous varieties of foliage.

Then again there is the danger of exposure to the venomous bites of snakes that infest the nearby woods. The physicians urge the students to supply themselves with tubes of antivenom when going on long hikes in the mountains.

"Corresponding to the increase in the amount of daylight there is a tendency for decline in the number of hours set aside for sleep and rest, said the health directors. "Now with the possibility of daylight saving being instituted more attention should be given the matter. Then, too, the student cannot be too strongly reminded of the necessity for proper breathing before engaging in the more strenuous sports on the intramural program."
