

Between the Lions with The Sports Editor

Another long cherished feature of the old Penn State goes haywire with Pitt's unexpected cancellation of what was to be the last in the long series of Panther-Lion encounters this fall.

With Pitt off the list, next fall's schedule is left with only four opponents of major caliber—Harvard, Syracuse, Colgate, and Temple.

From a financial angle, too it seems that substituting of another opponent for the open date would be wise. It's no secret that enticement of athletic schedules because of a need for financial retrenchment is contemplated for next year.

However, it is mainly with the feeling that Penn State should take advantage of the Pitt cancellation to regain a little of that lost football prestige by meeting an opponent of major standing and similar ideals that we advocate the filling of the open date.

Al McCoy, captain of the freshman football team here in 1921, will serve next fall as the first grid coach at Northeastern University in Boston.
