PATTEE WILL GIVE SECOND TALK ON LITERATURE TODAY

Emeritus Professor To Discuss
'The Republic of Letters'
In Little Theatre

LECTURE BEGINS AT 4:10
O'CLOCK THIS AFTERNOON

'Uncultivated American Literary History Plots' Selected
As General Topic

Speaking on "The Republic of Letters," Dr. Fred Lewis Pattee, emeritus professor of American literature, will deliver the second lecture of his annual series in the Little Theatre, Old Main, at 4:10 o'clock this afternoon. The second of his talks on the general topic, "Uncultivated Plots in American Literary History," Dr. Pattee's address will deal with the American people's desire to develop a kind of government inculcating certain ideals and principles. The speaker will trace the relationship between the development of American republican ideals and the political doctrines propagated in the literature of the period.

Will Publish Book

"Republican Satire" will be the title of Dr. Pattee's lecture tomorrow afternoon. Thursday, he will discuss "The Consumptive Poets," and Friday, in the concluding lecture of the series, "The American Novel Before Scott." The lectures will be open to students, faculty members, and the general public.

Dr. Pattee's lectures are preliminary studies of material he will use in a new volume of his series on the history of American literature. The first book in the group, "American Literature Since 1870," published several years ago, covered the period from 1870 to 1890. "The New American Literature," issued in 1930, was a critical discussion of works written between 1890 and the date of publication.

Series Opened Yesterday

The book now in preparation will cover American literature from its beginning until 1830 or 1840, and a fourth volume will carry the discussion up to 1870. The subject matter is given a popular rather than a textbook treatment in the series, according to critics.

In the opening lecture of the series yesterday, Dr. Pattee spoke on "The Fin de Siecle of the Eighteenth Century." He showed in his address how, with the organization of a new form of government, there grew up an attempt to express new ideas and a new literature. American humor and the novel arose in the "yellow nineties," Dr. Pattee pointed out, and the essay came into its own as an American literary form.

Since leaving Penn State three years ago, Dr. Pattee has occupied the position of lecturer on American literature at Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla. He was head of the English department here for thirty-four years.

In addition to his historical and critical works on American literature, Dr. Pattee has written several volumes of essays, a book of poems, and two novels. "Century Readings in American Literature," a collection edited by the literature professor, was used as the textbook in literature classes until this year.

SHIBLI WRITES TEXT ON 'TEACHING OF GEOMETRY'

Mathematics Professor Discusses
Recent Trends in Field

Prof. J. Shibli, of the mathematics department, has written and published a 252-page textbook on "Recent Developments in the Teaching of Geometry," it was announced last week.

In attempting to determine the response of elementary geometry to the modern educational movement which is not static but dynamic, Professor Shibli traces the important developments and general trends in the teaching of geometry and discusses the problems that teachers of geometry are facing at the present.

The Teachers College at Columbia University will use the new textbook in the teacher training classes this summer. The text has been characterized by critics as "a real contribution to the field of teaching of secondary mathematics."

In 1922 he received his master's degree from the University of Rochester, and then studied philosophy at Harvard University until 1925 when the degree of Doctor of Philosophy was conferred upon him. Before accepting his present position, Dr. Shimer taught philosophy at Ohio State University.

Hamas Will Not Make Boxing His Life Work, He Maintains

Ex-Lion Heavyweight Plans Medical Course After Completing Ring Career

"I don't intend to make boxing my life work," declared Steve Hamas '29, former eleven-letter athlete and at present a leading professional heavyweight, who has been visiting here since Friday.

"My plans still include a medical course after I finish boxing, but it would be foolish for me to stop now, after building up to the big bouts," the ex-Lion heavyweight continued. "The world's championship isn't necessarily my goal before I quit, although I'd like mighty well to win it." Discussing his two bouts with Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia heavyweight, Hamas revealed that he considers the former light heavyweight champion as one of the hardest men in the professional ranks to fight. Affirming that Loughran can make his opponent look very foolish by his clever boxing, Steve declared that the Philadelphia is a boxer who can be caught by a blow hard enough to knock him out only on rare occasions.

"I hope to win," Steve said in answer to a question concerning the probable outcome of a third fight with Loughran, a bout now under consideration by Philadelphia boxing promoters. The popularity of both Hamas and Loughran, coupled with the closeness of their last bout together has prompted talk of the third meeting of the two rivals. The former Lion athlete arrived here unexpectedly Friday afternoon, accompanied only by his wife, and

Upon attaining a sufficient height the pilot will cast loose the rope and direct the course of the plane by means of vertical and horizontal rudders as it coasts through the air.

Purchased by the club last week, the glider was brought here on an automobile trailer from LeRoy, N. Y., arriving Saturday night. Yesterday it was assembled by members of the club and placed on exhibition in a local garage, where it will remain until the end of the week. ## WORLD DEAF TO NEEDS' CHAPEL SPEAKER SAYS

Final Services of Year Conducted
By Upper Montclair Pastor

"Civilization is stopping its ears and pretending deafness to the problems which are confronting it today," George C. Vincent, pastor of the Union Congregational church, Upper Montclair, N. J., told chapelgoers at the last regular services of the year in Schwab auditorium Sunday morning.

"When there comes a proposal for a new way of handling our economic order, men simply refuse to listen," he said. "It is sheer nationalism or is it merely conceit that prevents our country from seeing what the world really needs?" the chapel speaker asked.

"Unfortunately, the youth of today is even more cynical and has less idealism than our present fathers and mothers," Dr. Vincent said. "World peace and universal economic cooperation can only come through the interrelation of our best international minds."
