Between the Lions with The Sports Editor

HOW ABOUT IT?

Tomorrow, eleven men will trot out on New Beaver Field bearing Penn State's 1932 football hopes.

In a sense, they will be bearing not only the fortunes of this season but the destiny of Penn State's future in the king of intercollegiate sports. This is a crucial year for our "noble experiment." The eyes of the football world will turn again to Penn State with the question-Can successful teams be developed where a non-scholarship rule exists? An unsuccessful season will not only present a disheartening answer to this query but will also sound a new low for Penn State's fast-waning athletic prestige.

Unheralded and unsung, the team will begin tomorrow the gigantic task of making a creditable showing as they plod their way through a schedule which includes four of the strongest teams in the East. Their load has been made heavier by an injury jinx which has taken a toll of five of their most promising fellow-players before a single intercollegiate contest has been played.

The men on this year's Lion eleven are playing the game because they love to play. They are the crystallization of Penn State's ideal that the principles of amateurism must not be violated. Willingly they are making the sacrifices training demands, because they have as their goal placing Penn State back in its former position in the football world.

All the support an appreciative student body can give should be the lot of both the squad and Head Coach Bob Higgins. The team will be out there fighting, no matter how disheartening the odds. In spirit, every Penn Stater should be making the same fight. The job won't be half so tough nor the sting of defeat half so bitter if we're out there pulling together. How about it?

Our Opponents

Harvard-Buffalo

The Crimson's inexperienced backfield will get its first test against Buffalo tomorrow, if the Buffalo eleven can really be called a test. It'll be an easy victory for Harvard, whose line should hold Buffalo scoreless.

Syracuse-St. Lawrence

Vic Hanson has his men rarin' to go after last Saturday's disappointing start against Clarkson, and the Larries, already buffeted around , by the Colgate steam-roller should prove easy victims. The Orange should win by five touchdowns.

Colgate-Case Little Case will hardily provide much more opposition for the juggernaut Andy Kerr has developed at Hamilton than did St. Lawrence. Our guess is that the score won't be as high, but the victory will be just as impressive.

Sewanee-Kentucky After a plucky Conference start against South Carolina's Gamecocks last week, the Sewanee Tigers will not fare so well when they stack up against Harry Gamage's Blue Grass cleven tomorrow. Kentucky, we'd say, will win by at least two touchdowns. Temple-Thiel We have a hunch that little Thiel will prove surprisingly stubborn to the Owls, in their first game tonight. However the Cherry and White should be on top when the smoke clears by just about three six-pointers.

This and That

American Beauty

The Football Annual lists Charlie Way '20 among the game's "Men of Destiny" . . . Speaking of the Lions' 1932 prospects, the book says, "The Nittany Lions are not the lambs of last year-not quite." . . . Oh, yeah? . . . And if you play football, did play football, or will play football, you're still wecome up at New Beaver Field . . .

Bill Lohr, Dave Long, Leo Skemp, "Doe" Conn, Harry Sigel, Carl Wile, Bill Kohut and Jim Boring will be available as backfield replacements and the injection of any one of this group will weaken the backfield not one whit.

6 Veterans Listed 🔑

Six veterans are included in the team that will take the field for Leb-anon Valley, four of them on the line and two in the backfield. Captain Kazlusky, left guard, Williams, left end, Wogan, center, Volkin, right tackle, and Feeser and Rust, half-backs, are the lettermen on this year's Annville team. Although the remaining five men on the visiting team weren't letter-winners in 1931, Sprenkle, left tackle, Kandrat, right guard, and Stone, fullback, are seniors with past experience Smith, right end, and Frank Boran quarterback, are the only sophomore expected to start. Although Lebanon Valley is also opening its season with tomorrow's Game, early practices have revealed Captain Kazlusky, Williams, Rust and Boran as outstanding in their play. The Annville gridders began practice on Monday, September 12, almost a week later than the Lions Coach Bob Higgins was non-commutal. In speaking of the Nittany prospects for tomorrow. "We're ex-pecting a hard game," he said. "Al-bund the tors he are here a size of the said. "Al-bund the tors here a size of the said.
