tion, the committee decided. The aims to be followed in this phase of the College are the following: to advance learning; to ascertain truth; to originate, improve and develop methods, processes and products; to provide new wealth in order that the citizens of the Commonwealth and the nation may live more genuinely and adequately.

Cognizance was taken in the report by the deans' committee that in fulfilling the spirit and obligations of the Federal Land Grant and subsequent acts, the College is an agent in the educational, social, and economic progress of the Commonwealth and the nation.

In the study of the entire plant and instructional program of the College, which is being made at President Hetzel's request, the Senate committee on courses of study will be guided in making recommendations for changes in line with the policies of the College by this set of objectives, Dean Charles W. Stoddard, of the Liberal Arts School, central committee chairman, declared.

Proposed changes in curricula, courses, and other branches of the resident instruction will be acted upon by the College Senate at its next meeting on January 5.

1892 Commencement Program Discovered in Second-Hand Book

A commencement program for the class of 1892 was recently found in a second hand book purchased in a Salvation Army store by Fred Bowles, of Binghamton, N. Y., according to Edward K. Hibshman, alumni secretary, to whom Bowles sent the copy.

The old program was found in a badly worn book entitled "The Casket of Political Gems" edited by Adam Craig in 1880. The alumni secretary intends to place it on exhibition at the Carnegie Library.

The commencement speaker for that year was the Hon. William U. Hensel, attorney general of the State in the Cabinet of Governor Pattison. Commencement was held Wednesday morning, June 15.

Two advertisements, one proclaiming the auction of choice building lots in State College by the firm of Foster Brothers of Philadelphia, and Aikens and Krumrine's general store, were at the bottom of the program.

Good Looks Not Necessary for Ideal Penn State Man, Co-ed Survey Shows

The Ideal Penn State Man does not have to be good-looking in the opinion of a representative group of co-eds who were interviewed for their ideas on the characteristics of that mythical character.

Many of the women specified appreciation for the intellectual, such as art, music, and literature, while others thought personality the prime requisite (without defining personality).

Jeanne G. Barwis, caustic satirist, states, "The Ideal Penn State Man is naturally the man who would be ideal anywhere. He would be mature without being solemn, well-poised without being falsely sophisticated. He would not attach significance to either overly-praised virtues or to the common crudities of which the average college boy is so aware. By this, I mean the ideal man would not pay too much attention to accepted attitudes. He would not classify women as types, realizing certain virtues in every woman."

"Although not requiring good looks, Isabel McFarland '33, president of the Y. W. C. A., insists that "the ideal man should not have ears that look like billowing sails." He should have a keen sense of humor, an appreciation for good books and music, a subtle "line," and intelligence.

The ideal quality which Jane K. Lee '34 admires is the ability to be a true friend to both men and women, emphasizing truthfulness and enough self-confidence not to develop a defense mechanism. He should have a distinct personality and not be a braggart.

Mary M. Westrick '33, women's editor of La Vie, thinks that the ideal man should have the courage of his convictions. "As to his attitude on co-eds, she says that he should not consider them as a species different from the other women he knows, that they are not inferior. On the same subject, Frances S. Inman '34 says that he should realize that co-eds are not one type and are just as human as men are.

Prof. Bristow Adams, editor of publications and director of the information service for the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, will address local Cornell alumni at their annual dinner meeting at the University club Saturday night.

Approximately sixty graduates of the Ithaca institution will attend the dinner along with visiting alumni from nearby towns. Dr. James F. Shigley, of the department of animal husbandry, president of the Cornell club here, will preside at the meeting.

A display of press clippings presenting a complete review of the activities of the 1932 Nittany Lion football team has been placed in the entrance of the main floor of Recreation hall by the College department of public information. Pre-game stories, pictures of individual players and accounts of the seven Lion games are included in the exhibit.

Dr. Wheeler P. Davey, of the physical chemistry department, attended a meeting of the governing board of the American Institute of Physics in New York City Saturday.

BARBER '31 TO PRESENT PAPERS AT CONFERENCE

Graduate Will Read 2 Articles on Bearing Performance Data

Everett M. Barber '31, an Elliott Research fellow in the engineering experiment station, will read the only student paper at a meeting of the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers opening tomorrow in New York City. The article deals with the handling of bearing performance data.

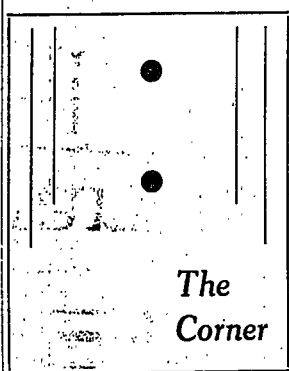

The paper was entered in student competition for a first prize of $200 some time ago. The selection of Barber's article as the only student paper at the meeting is believed to be an indication that he has won the contest.

Barber will also read a paper written by Charles C. Davenport '31, Texaco Research Fellow in collaboration with Prof. Louis J. Bradford, of the Mechanical Engineering department, on characteristic curves for lubricated bearings.

PROFESSORS WILL DISCUSS REPRODUCTION OF PLANTS

Reproduction of plants will be the main topic of discussion at the ninth annual Horticulture Week, which will begin here on December 14 and continue for three days, according to Dr. Stevenson W. Fletcher, vice-dean and director of research in the School of Agriculture.

Speakers on the vegetable gardening program will include Dr. Warren B. Mack, Prof. Charles E. Myers, Prof. Milton T. Lewis, Prof. Jesse M. Huffington, W. B. Nissley, Claud D. Morley, Gerald J. Stout, extension specialists.

SUGAR SPECIALIST RETURNS

Rafael L. Menendez '15, who has been employed in Cuba as an expert in sugar cane culture, has returned to the College to study the latest developments in agronomy, with particular reference to the mechanization of agricultural operation. He plans to apply these new ideas to the growing of sugar cane.
