7 CUSTOMS CASES

Freshmen Found Guilty Will Wear
Dresses, Bonnets, Tin Cans,
Signs as Punishment

Seven freshmen were judged guilty of customs violations at a meeting of Student Tribunal Tuesday night.

Adolph W. Blondheim, convicted for talking back to upperclassmen and refusing to obey orders, will wear two pieces of toast, one tied over each ear. He will carry explanatory signs reading "I Am a Ham Sandwich," and "Tribunal Has Changed Me," for two weeks.

Found guilty of dating, Harold A. Hilton, will carry a sign reading "I Am Rattled Over Co-eds," and in his ambling about the campus will drag around a tin can tied to a rope about his waist. Henry J. Hunter, also convicted of dating, will carry a sign "I Am a Co-ed Lover," and must tie tin cans to each of his ankles.

Paul W. Isenberg will carry a sign reading "Freshman Party Boy," and will wear a dress and bonnet as a result of a dating conviction, while "I Am a Co-ed Party Boy" will be the sign carried by Kenneth C. Semans, who will also wear a dress and bonnet. Charles C. Pace, guilty of going without customs, will write the freshman customs and class song in long-hand one hundred times, while Paul C. Starzell will carry a sign reading "I Like Customs Now" as a result of committing the same offense.

Special lighting will be provided in order to facilitate reading of the words of the songs. Dr. Robert L. THROUGH OTHER EYES

The Pennsylvanian Favors Athletic Subsidies

The popularity of the American game of football, the sport which headlines the athletic programs in colleges, preparatory and high schools, is increasing year by year. Alert universities and colleges are realizing this rising state of interest and are striving to maintain their reputation in collegiate athletic circles by obtaining the best coaches and players available.

A college or university, to have a winning football team, needs a smart coach, keen spirit in the student body, the whole-hearted backing of alumni, and most of all, good material.

No matter who the coach may be, whether he is a second Rockne or a second Warner, he will not be able to turn out a winning team if he does not have good material to work with. Today there are no miracle coaches. From poor material there can be developed only a losing team.

Pennsylvania is one of the largest universities in the country. Her scholastic standards have been admirably high, and the success of her athletic teams on the gridiron has been outstanding. This fall, with Coach Harman at the helm, Pennsylvania enjoyed continued success. She has a good coach and good material. Coach Harman has promised he will be with us next year, but our material is going. The squad loses seventeen men through graduation next June. Seven of these men were mainstays during the season just completed.

The Red and Blue mentor turns his weather eye to the 1933 gridiron campaign and is optimistic. He has four outstanding players back, three men ready to step into vacant positions, a wealth of material vying for two other posts, and but two berths which will cause him any real concern. But what of the 1934 football season?

From the 1935 freshman team there stepped into the varsity squad but a few men of any real football ability. Only two of these men have shown possibilities as yet. The 1936 first-year outfit was stronger than its predecessor, but it was far from the caliber of freshman teams that have been produced at Pennsylvania within the last decade.

The Gates Plan carries a clause that relieves the University of any financial assistance to athletes while they are at Pennsylvania. However, since the average football player comes from an ordinary family, his parents are not in a position to pay his tuition at this or any other large university.

We need the average football player here at Pennsylvania, but he can ever come unless there is some means of meeting a tuition of $400. Hence the University must do one of two things—either go out and find men with real football ability, aiding them financially through athletic scholarships, or relinquish her present position in collegiate spirit circles and stress only intramural football. We favor the former alternative.

The University has for decades given scholarships annually to students who have shown special interest and adaptability to studies. This University can just as well give scholarships to fine young men who do not show unusual scholastic talent, but are truly versed in the art of the great fall pastime, football.

However, Pennsylvania does not want a man for his football ability alone. Students should come to Pennsylvania for an education. If they fail to meet certain specified scholastic standards, they should be dismissed. There is no reason why Pennsylvania cannot bring into its portals the highest type of athlete, aid him financially for his athletic ability, and require him to meet the scholastic standards by strict eligibility rules.

The facts are evident; it is unnecessary to elucidate further. The Gates Plan has been in operation for the last two years; we are convinced that it has been given a fair trial; we are in accord with its principles. It is basically sound, but it is also true that no reform of the magnitude such as that which is contemplated under the Gates Plan can exist for long without modification or change due to the pressure of existing conditions.

If it is felt that members of a football team should be rewarded for their services, and we feel that they should be, then let us face the facts squarely and accept that condition.

Winning football teams should not be an end in itself; there are other factors which are contingent upon the success of an athletic program; it is because of these conditions that we recommend a change.

Congress To Modify
Volstead Act Soon,
Dr. Tanger Believes

Modification of the Volstead Act will be accomplished during the present "lame duck" session of Congress, in the opinion of Dr. Jacob Tanger, head of the political science department. He also believes that the bill will not be vetoed by the president if it passes Congress by a substantial majority.

An interesting angle of the fight to repeal the Volstead Act will be the move of the California grape interests to block any attempt to legalize beer without also including light wines in the same category, Dr. Tanger adds.

Dr. Tanger agrees with the suggestion that defeated presidential candidates automatically be made members of the Senate as this action could be effected very easily without any involved machinery.

According to the political science head, this would give the country the advantage of having another capable man in government, and would eliminate the present system of sacrificing an experienced man because the people had turned down a political party.

An exhibition of autographed letters and books by current and recent authors is being shown on the second floor of the Carnegie Library this week; William P. Lewis, College librarian, has announced.

FERGUSON MAKES ADDRESS

Prof. John A. Ferguson, head of the forestry department, addressed the graduates and undergraduate students of the New York State College of Forestry Wednesday.

13 Representatives Favor Change to
Election of Panhellenic President

Thirteen of the eighteen representatives to Panhellenic Council are in favor of changing the present system of rotation of the presidency of the Council to one of election, seven members desiring immediate change, while six favor completing the present rotation before the revision is made.

To secure the position of president for the most competent person and thus assure greatest efficiency for that body was the reason given by those desiring immediate change of system. The seven expressing this opinion were: Ruth Crowthers '33, and Eva M. Blichfeldt '34, Kappa Kappa Gamma representatives; Phyllis G. Beidler '33, Delta Gamma; Margaret E. Borland '34, Alpha Omicron Pi; Victoria R. Magda '34, Theta Phi Alpha; and Iona Pearce '33 and Ruth H. Harmon '34, Kappa Alpha Theta. They favor election of the president within Panhellenic Council itself.

Although they consider a change of system as a distinct improvement in the Council, seven members think that in fairness to the fraternities who have not had their presidential terms as yet, the rotation plan should be continued until the list has been completed before introducing a new method of selection of the president.

Smoking First Used
As Holy Ceremony,
Dr. Arnold Reveals

Present day smokers are really "softies" and take a back seat when compared to the charter members of the art. Smoking, when first practiced, was in reality a holy rite, and was chiefly indulged in to put the smoker into a state of unconsciousness, an investigation conducted by Dr. Harrison H. Arnold, assistant professor of romance languages, has brought to light.

Dating back to 1595 the art of smoking was in vogue among the chiefs and principal men of the Indian tribes on the islands of Haiti and Santo Domingo, according to Dr. Arnold. Smoke emanating from a type of herbs that resembles the Bugloss was inhaled by the natives through a "Y"-shaped tube, two barrels of which were fitted directly into the smoker's nostrils.

The chiefs inhaled the smoke from the herbs until they became unconscious and lay on the ground in a stupor. Then they were carried to bed by their many wives, or left to lie on the ground until the stupor passed off.

13 Representatives Favor Change to
Election of Panhellenic President

Jane K. Lee '34, Phi Mu, approved the above plan.

S. Louise Everett '33, president of the Panhellenic body approves of the system that is in use at present, believing that it is the only method of keeping politics out of the organization. Echoing her sentiments, J. Marie Prather '34, and Viola V. Van Noy '34, Gamma Phi Beta; Elsa I. Ottinger '33, and Berenice L. Ross '34, Alpha Chi Omega; and A. Elizabeth Preston '33, Alpha Omicron Pi, are also in favor of the retention of the present plan.
