ENTIRELY FITTING and proper was Student Council's reappraisal of the regulation passed last Spring which permits second semester dating by freshmen. An obvious addition, too, was that of removing dress customs on Saturday nights when dating will be most common.

IN PROPOSING to study the problem of uniting men's and women's student government, the leaders have set for themselves a difficult task. That there are offices in both men's and women's government as meaningless and useless as some honorary fraternities, most students will agree.

THE SUPPORT which faculty and staff members have given to the Unemployment Relief funds this year, although not in dollars and cents comparable to that of last year, is worthy of recognition. Throughout the entire country members of the teaching profession have been bearing a considerable part of direct as well as indirect relief work.

THE REDUCTION of the price of Senior Ball tickets with no attendant lessening of costs may be classed as another "noble experiment." Because a group of seniors held so firmly to the belief that more persons would attend the function as the result of a reduction in price, the committee has taken the risk.

Technocracy Shows Needs, Cannot Fulfill Them, Engineers Declare

Summing up technocracy as "exceedingly valuable in pointing out a need, but of dubious merit in fulfilling it," members of the Central Pennsylvania section of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers agreed that technocracy has performed a valuable service in centering attention on the consequences of a lack of knowledge of economics, sociology, and technical advance, at their discussion here Tuesday night.

Condemnation of the movement from an engineering standpoint was voiced by Prof. J. Orvis Keller, head of the engineering extension department, while Prof. Harney W. Stover, of the same department, pointed out economic defects in the movement, during the meeting.

Asserting that instead of reducing employment, technical engineering advances have probably increased it, Professor Keller showed that the number of persons gainfully employed increased steadily from 1900 to 1910 and that in 1930, a depression year, 39.7 percent of the population were employed. Much of the stagnation of the country and in the world generally is due to tariffs, he hinted.

Phillipines Capable Of Self-rule Soon, Dr. Tanger States

"The Philippine Islands will be ready for complete independence at the end of the seven-year period specified in the bill recently passed by Congress," according to Dr. Jacob Tanger, head of the political science department.

Scoring wide-spread opinion that the Philippines will not be capable of governing themselves, Dr. Tanger pointed out that an efficient educational system has been preparing the Filipinos for the step since Spain ceded the islands to the United States following the Spanish-American War in 1898.

"Complete freedom will not be granted, of course, and an arrangement will be made to have the islands protected from foreign conquest," Dr. Tanger continued. "The United States will probably not agree to a mandate over the Philippines, as that system would mean reporting to the League of Nations."

Dr. Tanger is not so apprehensive of foreign invasion; however, as he is of domestic suppression. If the Philippines were to govern themselves, he fears, one class of Filipinos would dominate and subject the government to its policies.

DR. BERNREUTER TO SPEAK

Dr. Robert G. Bernreuter, of the psychology department, will speak on "Mental Hygiene and Efficient Living" before members of the freshman commission at the cafeteria in the Home Economics building, at noon tomorrow.

FRESHMEN WIN RIFLE MEET

Freshman sharpshooters successfully defeated the Varsity R. O. T. C. rifle team in a challenge match Friday night by the score of 901 to 878. Marshall W. Myers '36 and Charles C. Pace '36 held individual scores of 186 and 178, respectively.

the technocrats hold that the industrial age has satisfied the material wants and desires of mankind, while the economists hold that the desires and wants of man are insatiable. The industrial age has had the opposite effect of increasing mankind's desires, he maintained.

A fundamental revision of the banking system would go a long way toward eliminating the present deficiencies in the present price system, Prof. Stover believes. This change would be immensely easier than to attempt to teach the people to use energy as a commodity, he said.

Prominent Names Feature Library Autograph Group

Over seventy names of prominent American authors, poets, dramatists, and critics are on display in Alcove K on the second floor of the College Library. Among the list are six Pulitzer prize winners, and recipients of various other honorary awards.

The names were collected several years ago by the College when an English institute during the summer session was being planned. Autographs are on the letters of reply to invitations to give lectures at the session. Some of the names have been collected by Librarian Lewis during his work at other libraries.

An interesting sidelight of the exhibit is the wording of the letters of refusal. All replies are worded to the effect that they sincerely regret their "inability to visit your beautiful mountain retreat in the cool of summer, and spend a delightful period of study in the company of so many charming people."

Some names among the prominent list are Stewart Edward White, Robert Frost, John Erskine, Gamaliel Bradford, Christopher Morley, Genevieve Lewis, Zona Gale, Sinclair Taggard, Carl Sandburg, Willa Cather, Lytton Strachey, William Daniel Steele, Hamlin Garland, Edna Ferber, Elsie Singmaster Lewars, William McFee, and Ida Tarbell.

CLUB WILL GIVE CONCERT

The regular weekly victrola concert of classical music will be given by the Social Problems club in the Hugh Beaver room in Old Main at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night. Borodin's "Prince Igor Ballet" and "On the Steppes of Asia" will be included on the program.

Penn State COLLEGIAN

Dear Sir:

I should like to take this opportunity of explaining to the members of the Class of 1933 the basis upon which Senior Senior Br'll is being conducted this year.

As drawn up in November the initial budget for the dance showed an approximate reduction of fifty percent in expenditures. According to this plan the admission price was slashed from $5.00 to $4.00 per couple. However, this drastic curtailment in funds was not considered sufficient, and at the instigation of a group of seniors the price was further reduced to $3.00 per couple. It was from these same seniors that we received definite assurance that the cut in price would materially increase the attendance at the function.

For this unusually small admission charge the committee has procured Emerson Gill and his nationally known orchestra. A solidly-covered ceiling, revolving crystal ball, and palm and smilax decorations will feature the theme in presenting the proper atmosphere for the Ball.

But at this price these very features reduce the affair to a great experiment. Therefore, I feel that the responsibility for the success of the dance lies with the student body. If the students do not patronize the affair the sponsors of similar functions will not be able to lower their prices. Lack of proper support on the part of the students will demonstrate that they are not concerned with the price of dances, and consequently the admission charge will return to its former level.

It may also be pointed out to the members of the Class of 1933 that the Senior Ball committee will make every attempt to offer them the quality of entertainment which they demand. If

ARCHITECTS TO SHOW WORK

Representative work in all classes of the architecture department will be shown at a special exhibition in the Fine Arts building at Lehigh University, from February 5 to 19. Penn State is one of the three colleges invited to exhibit work, the others being the University of Pennsylvania and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

those seniors who pressed so greatly for the reduction in price do not, along with the remainder of the class, support their own dance, a substantial deficit, which will necessarily have to be met by the class as a whole, will show in the dance budget.

The dance is rightfully that of the seniors and has been shaped to meet their demands. I ask them to remember that the success of this price experiment lies with them alone, and not with any committee.

Sincerely yours, JOHN A. WOOD, Senior Class President
