

Dr. Simmons Believes Students Here Capable of Honors Course System

Penn State students are just as capable of assuming the responsibilities of an honors course system as students in other colleges, in the opinion of Dr. Lucretia V. T. Simmons, head of the German department.

"An honors course is good for those students of initiative and knowledge who know exactly what they want," said Dr. Simmons. "It creates a sense of scholarly responsibility and a sharpened critical sense, and the increased contact with the professor is especially beneficial."

Dr. Simmons pointed out that a committee to suggest a method for honors courses in the School of Liberal Arts was appointed in April, 1926, and was composed of Dr. Wayland F. Dunaway, of the history department, Prof. Jabir Shibli, of the mathematics department, and herself. A report was submitted but was later revised by a second committee consisting of Dr. Carl W. Hasek, head of the economics department, Dr. Francis J. Tschan, of the history department, and Dr. Simmons. After considering the final report in January, 1928, the Liberal Arts faculty decided not to vote for any definite regulations at that time, but to leave it optional with each department to try out the idea, Dr. Simmons said. Since that time, however, no honors courses have been instituted in the School of Liberal Arts.

Under the arrangement proposed at that time, the professor would give to students electing an honors course a synopsis of study to work out for the year. The student would then investigate the problem in all of its ramifications, and would confer weekly with the professor. He might attend other classes to get material he needed, and at the end of the semester he would take a comprehensive examination. "One disadvantage of the plan is that it would call for double administration, since individual conferences would be necessary," Dr. Simmons added. "If some professors are delegated to honors course work, they will have to be released from other duties."

RED FLANNELS

BUT he lived in a different age. We don't wear red flannels in this day of steam heat and closed cars. And we don't need so many heavy, hot foods.

A bowl of Kellogg's is sensible and refreshing. Rich in energy, easy to digest. Delicious for any meal. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Tobacco to smoke right

has to be a different kind of tobacco from that used in cigarettes... and it has to be made by an entirely different process...

OUT in Kentucky, where they have pretty women, fast horses, and blue grass, there grows a tobacco called White Burley. It doesn't grow anywhere else in the world.

There is a type of this White Burley that is best suited for pipe smoking. It is neither too thick nor too thin. It is not light and chaffy; at the same time, it is not rank or strong. "U. S. Type 31" is the government classification for White Burley.

Since no other pipe tobacco has yet been found which seems to equal White Burley, this is what we use in making Granger Rough Cut.

Next, we use the Wellman Method, a famous 1870 method of making pipe tobacco, to give Granger its fine flavor and fragrance. Then, too, Granger is "Rough Cut"—just like they used to "whittle" their tobacco off a plug with a jack-knife. It smokes cool, lasts longer and never gums a pipe.

And finally, we want to sell Granger for 10 cents. Good tobacco—right process—cut right. So we put Granger in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package.

Granger has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. Folks seem to like it.
