The Sports Editor

Tomorrow's inactivity as far as intercollegiate competition locally is concerned is just the lull before the storm, for next week the annual torrent of left jabs and right hooks that is more commonly known as the Eastern Boxing Intercollegiate will be with us. While the fact that the entry list of some of the schools invited has been curtailed lessens the number of boxers in the fistie spectacle, the news that even non-member schools are showing an active interest in the tournament is encouraging. There can be no doubt but that successful staging of boxing tournaments adds greatly to Penn State's athletic prestige; from present indications, the affair next week, even in the face of adverse financial conditions of the present, will be able to take its place among the Lion ring successes.

Meanwhile, that undefeated wrestling team of ours is literally chafing at the bit as it awaits the supreme test of tournament competition in New York next week-end. It has been a long time since Penn State has had a championship mat squad, but the feeling seems prevalent about the campus that if the boys don't actually bring home the bacon, they'll at least have been within reaching distance. Charlie Speidel isn't saying anything as yet. But the look of expectancy that crosses his face when the mat trials are mentioned indicates to us that he, too, believes there may be a little bit of glory waiting in the big city for a lean and hungry Lion.

This and That
Writing in the Colgate Maroon, Sports Editor Tom Walsh remarks that the Penn State-Colgate cage tilt "was a little rough in spots, perhaps" . . . This should be news to Spike Leslie and his court Lions . . . And also, we understand, to the referees . . .

LION MITMEN WILL OPPOSE WESTERN MARYLAND AWAY

TO CLOSE SEASON AGAINST TERRORS

Coach Leo Houck Selects Same Team That Tied Army for Encounter Tomorrow

By CHARLES A. MYERS '34
Bolstered by the same lineup that denuded the Army, the Nittany Lions will probably munch Greens without any Terrors when they close their 1933 season in the Western Maryland ring at Westminster, Md., tomorrow night.

This year the Green Terrors have only a fair team; they can boast of no individual stars such as one-time intercollegiate champions Crosby, Brubaker, Klepac, or Elkaitis. Consequently, Penn State's two johnnies-on-the-spot, Captain Johnny McAndrews and Johnny Napoleon, should lead a fairly easy Lion conquest of the Western Maryland stronghold.

Kaplan Outstanding
Mathias, Gorski, and Bernie Kaplan, who defeated Tom Slusser last year, are the outstanding men on the Western Maryland team. Kaplan has won every fight this year, Mathias two, and Gorski two and a draw.

Coach Leo Houck's lineup is unchanged. Johnny Napoleon, who looks like a substantial Lion hope for the intercollegiate, should have little trouble in disposing of Harrison, an inexperienced bantamweight.

Zeleznock To Fight
Mike Zeleznock will again meet a clever opponent, as he has in his last two 125-pound encounters, when he opposes Mathias, winner over Dolan of Navy.

Paul Ferrero, with three draws and a decision to his credit, will sling the leather with Brown, who was knocked out by the Navy man in the third round. If Paul uses the same left jab that earned him the decision in the Army meet he should annex a point in this lightweight bout.

Unless he is terribly off form, Captain Johnny McAndrews can be counted on to breeze right through the 145-pound set. He meets either Haines, Kiefer, or Osh, none of whom has won a fight this year.

Alex Turnbull, who has conclusively shown that he can give as well as take punishment, is Leo's choice for the 155-pound entry. Alex will face Keyser, whose left jab nearly earned him "Mut" Kessler will again fight out of his natural weight when he trades blows with Gorski, of Western Mary-

Lewis Knocks Out Amateur Champion

Al Lewis '32, former Lion welterweight and national collegiate titleholder, returned to action for the first time since the Olympic tryouts in June by knocking out Frankie Barton, State amateur champion, in the second round of their fight at Harrisburg Monday night.

As a collegiate boxer, Al won the Eastern intercollegiate welterweight title in 1931 and 1932, in addition to the national crown last April. He is now training for future engagements.

FRESHMAN CAGERS TO CLOSE SEASON

Bucknell Yearlings, Wyoming Quintet Will Oppose Lion Plebes in Final Games

Concluding their season with a pair of major tilts on foreign courts, freshman courtmen will leave at noon today for Lewisburg where they will oppose the Bucknell first-year quintet at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. Tomorrow night the yearlings will meet the Wyoming Seminary cagers at Wilkes-Barre.

The yearlings, strengthened by the return of Riley, pivot man, who was temporarily disabled because of a leg injury, have spent the past week in scrimmaging against a zone defense, the type used by both the Bucknell and Wyoming quintets.

Bucknell freshmen, who recently defeated the strong Lafayette yearling quintet, promise to give the State passers stiff opposition, while the Wyoming passers registered a 25-to-19 win over the Lion freshmen when the two teams clashed here last month.

Ten men have been named to make the trip by coach Mike Leeds. Staff, Scott, Smith, and Stokes have been selected as forwards, Riley and Kensinger will see service in the pivot roles, while Knapp, Andrews, Williams, and Young have been chosen as defense men.

land in the 165-pound class, while Tom Slusser will be out to avenge his defeat of last year at the hands of Bernie Kaplan, Terror 175-pounder. If a heavyweight bout is used, either Anderson or Frank Nebel will meet L. Kaplan, who lost in the Navy meet.

MATMEN CONTINUE INTENSIVE TRAINING

Nittany Wrestlers To Compete in Intercollegiate Bouts At New York City

By B. H. ROSENZWEIG '31

With a perfect record of five victories and no defeats in dual meets this year to inspire the wrestling team to redoubled effort, Coach Charlie Speidel is putting his grapplers through a two-weeks "refining" period in preparation for the intercollegiate which will be held at Columbia University on March 17 and 18.

Captain Mike Lorenzo will lead a full team of eight men into the competition which will be waged by eight colleges this year. Schools to participate for the championship are Lehigh, titleholder of last year, Columbia, Princeton, Yale, Pennsylvania, Syracuse, Cornell and Penn State.

5 Champions To Compete
Although five individual champions from last year will participate in the tournament, the Nittany Lions still stand a good chance to regain the wrestling title they lost a few years ago. Lehigh looms as the biggest opposition to the Blue and White, boasting three titleholders, Dalling, Bishop, and Captain Peck.

Lion wrestlers lost only eight of the forty individual matches engaged in this year, two of which went to extra periods while one was an unnatural fall. However, the Nittany team's relative strength cannot be easily determined since Cornell and Syracuse were the only dual opponents entered in the tourney.

4 Undefeated Lions Entered
Ellstrom and Lorenzo made the best showing for the Blue and White in the intercollegiate last year, the 126-pounder gaining second place while Mike took third in the 145-pound class. Even though both Lions have two defeats chalked up against them in dual meets, they loom as good possibilities to take their weights.

"Cheerful" Charlie, however, has four undefeated grapplers to pin his hopes on. Rosy Rosenberg, experienced and reliable, Bill Cramer, clever and versatile, the strong Lou Kreizman, and the Lions' fast heavyweight, "King" Cole, all are training down to the pink of condition for the tourney.

McFarlane Bags 114 Points To Lead Lion Court Squad

McMinn Places Second For Season With 104 Tallies

By WM. M. STEGMEIER '31

Now that everything is over but the shouting so far as Penn State basketball is concerned for this year, the time is ripe for a few statistics and, possibly, a few bouquets.

Proving himself to be the deadliest shot on the team, Norrie McFarlane, with 114 points chalked up to his credit, and an average of 10.3 points per game, leads the pack of Lion scorers, a survey of the 1933 court records shows. Ed McMinn, last year's high man, follows just a step behind the leader with 104 points and a 9.4 average.

The rest of the Lions have figures opposite their names which are considerably lower. Henning rang up thirty field goals in eleven games to secure the next highest average per game, a 6.0, while Conn and Thomas follow with the theoretical figures of 4.8 and 2.7 points in every contest.

Even though Norrie has usurped Ed's position as King of the scoring columns by topping him in total number of points scored, McMinn still reigns so far as the actual amount of field goals are concerned, and also in foul percentages. Ed looped no less than forty-four two-pointers during the season as compared to Norrie's forty-one.

In the realm of foul goals, the Nittany guard accumulated a .727 average by counting sixteen out of twenty-two shots while Norrie was next with thirty-two free goals out of forty-nine chances. Nevertheless, Norrie retained his average lead by means of the large number of charity throws.

Comparing the team as a unit with opponents' clubs, Leslie's five out-scored the eleven quintets which opposed them this year, 343-to-335. And, again speaking in terms of averages, the Nittany passers secured one more point per game than the other teams.

In foul shooting the Lions were slightly weaker than their rivals. The Lesliemen garnered a foul percentage of .570 in the eleven games scheduled, while opposing quintets reaped the slightly better percentage of .608. The Lions bagged 69 out of

Court Statistics

Penn State	Opponent
343 Total Points	235
31 Average Points Per Game	30
69 Foul Goals	73
121 Foul Tries	120
.570 Foul Goal Percentage	.608
137 Field Goals	131

121 chances at the basket and other teams got 73 out of 120. Carl Wittum rates the only perfect foul percentage by making good his only three attempts.

McFarlane rolled up the highest individual score in any one game during the season by tossing eighteen points through the hoop in the Western Maryland game. McMinn was a bit more consistent and stayed around his 9.4 average all during the season.

Six of the squad of thirteen cagers broke into every contest played: McMinn, Thomas, Henning, McFarlane, Conn, and Wittum. With the exception of Stocker who played in eight games, the rest of the team sat on the bench for the greater part of the season.

According to last year's figures, McMinn carried off first honors then with a 9.5 average. Captain Brand was second and Norrie ran third with a 6 average. Although the Lions held a point-a-minute record for almost half the season, the closing games put a crimp to any such record-making aspirations.

Heyison, Wittum, Fletcher, and Stocker are the old members of the second club who maintained an average of over a point a game. Because of the infrequency and brevity of substitutions during the season, a record much better than this was virtually impossible for them.

DeYoung, flashy Syracuse forward, secured the largest individual total by any opposing player during the season. It is significant to note how rarely a Lion cager was forced out of games on personals.
