AWAITING TRUSTEE ACTION

Action of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees, which meets at Harrisburg this afternoon, will be awaited with more than ordinary interest throughout the College.

While details of the proposed budget have not been made public, it is anticipated that each department of the College will be forced to operate with considerably less funds than it has had for the past two years in order to balance the budget with the estimated income to the College.

A cut in faculty and administration staff salaries looms as an almost certainty. Faculty members, informed of probable salary reductions some time ago, have shown their willingness to cooperate with the administration as far as possible.

A GOAL FOR TEACHERS

While many of his hearers were unable to reconcile the thoughts of honesty and integrity with the system which Cameron Beck upheld as a striking example of these qualities in his lecture Tuesday night, his plea for a better understanding between teacher and pupil struck home.

The fine turnout of Summer Session students to hear Mr. Beck, incidentally, is a fair indication of the academic attitude which seems to reign over the campus this summer.

FRESHMAN REGISTRATION GRATIFYING

Early reports of freshman registration for the 1933-34 regular session are cheerful in view of current economic conditions. While approximately 250 fewer high school and preparatory school graduates have applied for admission than did so a year ago at this time, the number offered admission on the same basis as last year is higher and the number who have definitely accepted admission to the College is exactly the same.

Equally gratifying is the fact that the scholastic standing of those who have applied thus far this year is higher rather than lower than that of the 1932 group. Fears were expressed when the College first announced its intention to accept 200 more freshmen than usual that the scholastic rating of the College would accordingly suffer.

Students of the drama will have an unusual opportunity Tuesday night in seeing a professional company of high repute play "The Merchant of Venice."

DISHING THE DIRT

This actually happened to Eddie Dill, the Phigan fire fighter, who was traveling alone to the Smoky City. Being lonely, Eddie decided to pick up some one to talk to.

There was a brief pause and then, "Uh, sorree, me no spikem de Eenglish."

"Egad," thought Eddie, "this will never do. Surely there must be some Americans doing a little hitch-hiking."

"Well, what did ya think of the Yanks yesterday?" Dill asked his second patron.

"This time the answer came back on a little card, reading:

"This is to certify that Mr. _____ is totally deaf and dumb. Do your bit for suffering humanity."

Chop Suey: or Things I Never Noodle Now: Wayland Dunaway is one of the best little one-arm drivers for his size that we know of.

Nudism may be gaining a foothold in State College but already the long arm of the law has reached out to hold it in check. It seems that if you happen to be playing tennis in shorts you will be told about it (providing you are a male) by a campus patrolman.

Harry Hill, Glenland life preserver, the other day was proudly displaying a beautiful picture of a parrot where you would least expect to see a picture of a parrot.

Through the Keyhole: Dottie Boehm eased her aching tootsie-wootsie's Friday night after the reception dance by walking home in her bare feet.

Speaking Of Books

"Play is a pastime Work is a satisfaction Food is an essential Sleep is a remedy A friend is a pleasure and A book is all five."

"Old Chicago," by Mary Hastings Bradley.

Four interesting sketches with nineteenth century Chicago as a background. The first book tells of Old Fort Dearborn and the last winds up with the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893.

"As the Earth Turns," by Gladys Carroll.

A state of Maine farm and the Shaw family furnish the setting for a familiar, homely, intimate chronicle and love story.

"South Moon Under," by Marjorie K. Rawlings.

This is another close to the soil story but in far different soil and with a different people. The soil is in the Florida scrub and the people are the Florida crackers—a picturesque and pioneer race.

"The Grain Race" by Alan Villiers.

The romance of the sailing vessel has almost disappeared from the earth. From the early days Cape Horn has furnished the scene for many an exciting adventure and ship wreck.

MEDSGER TO GIVE LECTURE

"Nature Poetry" will be the subject of a lecture by Oliver P. Medsger, head of the natural science department, Lincoln high school, Jersey City, N. J., in room 110 of the Home Economics building at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night.

Penn's Cave, Destination of Excursion, Noted for Richness in Indian Legend

Students who made the Summer Session excursion Saturday had an opportunity to witness one of the richest spots in Indian legend that may be found in the State—Penn's Cave.

Many stories are told about the early days of the cave but there is one bit of Indian lore about the cavern which seems to outlive the rest. The earliest time on record that the story was first told was back in 1892.

The legend concerns a young Frenchman, Malachi Boyer, who set out to explore the wilderness west of what is now Sunbury.

Unfortunately, according to the legend which the Seneca Indian told, the laws of the red race would not permit the couple to marry, so late one night they decided to try what would now amount to an "elopement" and attempted to get to the eastern settlements.

Visitors to the cave still claim that on quiet summer nights an eerie echo rings through the cave which sounds like, "Nita-nee—Nita-nee."
