Complete copies of the by-laws of the Honor Society Council and complete class standing lists can be obtained from Prof. Harold A. Everett, secretary of the Council, in Room 207, Main Engineering building. The following rule from the by-laws should be borne in mind by officers and members of the various societies: "Election to an honor society shall take place not earlier than the second semester of the junior year, except that twenty percent of the eligible juniors may be elected in the first semester."

All freshmen will be required to attend the mass meeting in the Chemistry annex at 7:30 Wednesday night. The meeting, which will be under the direction of John M. Stocker '35, junior class president, will be devoted to organization for freshmen class elections and a discussion of the class dance.

All members of Discobulus, physical education society, will meet at the Sigma Pi fraternity house at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night. Dr. Carroll D. Champlin, of the department of education and psychology, will speak on "Cultural Value of Athletics."

All students interested in either intramural or intercollegiate debating should report to Room 465 Old Main Wednesday night, October 18, at 7:30 o'clock.

All freshman women interested in debating will meet in room one North Liberal Arts building at 6:30 o'clock tonight. Plans for the season and arrangements for try-outs will be made at the meeting.

Student Tribunal will meet in Room 318 Old Main, at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

Ameer Zaa-zaa, German Shepherd Dog Displays Theatrical Ability

"... Well, if I can't keep this puppy, when I grow up I'm going to have a real dog," the little boy protested.

And he did, as some hundred Penn State undergraduates who have seen both the man, Saleem M. Thomas, and the dog, Ameer Zaa-zaa, in the last few days can testify.

Thomas, a traveling salesman, who came to this country from Syria, had brought a little dog home with him one night when he was six years old. His mother refused him permission to keep it around the house. So he grew up, came to America, and so far has had two 'real' dogs. The first, Nessra, is now dead, and it is her son, Zaa-zaa, that has entertained various members of the student body at odd times during the last few days.

Both Nessra and Zaa-zaa spring from full blooded German Shepherd stock, claimed by Mr. Thomas to be among the most intelligent races of dogs alive. Zaa-zaa, the black-tan 'german police' who has shown some of his tricks hereabouts, is six years old now, has traveled 135,000 miles with Mr. Thomas, understands three languages, and includes the expressions "I love you" and "Go to hell," among his colloquialisms.

It was Friday night that Penn State really got a look at the dog. Mr. Thomas was putting him through his paces in front of the main campus gate. Zaa-zaa obediently climbed one of Penn State's elms to retrieve a ball of paper, imitated a wounded soldier returning from the trenches, immediately began digging furiously upon a request to imitate the actions of the Chinese when the Japanese attacked them last year. He turned to his right, his master's left, and backed up upon spelled or stated orders from Mr. Thomas—given partly in French, partly in English, and with a little Syrian thrown in for good measure.

"Oh, yes, I have to be very careful what I feed him," Mr. Thomas pointed out, as he pulled one of Zaa-zaa's long pointed ears. "Traveling about as we do, he would quickly become upset if his diet was not carefully regulated."
"How did he learn three languages? Well, you see, I bred him, and started talking to him—like a child—when he was about two months old. His first tricks he learned very slowly, but after he got the idea, he remembered them quickly." Mr. Thomas is enthusiastic when speaking of his hobby, reticent when speaking of himself and in his part of the training.

"Ameer Zaa-zaa is the name of an Arabian chieftain who was a great friend of my father's. It means, 'Wandering Chieftain', but Zaa-zaa doesn't wander away. Oh! No. His mother, Nessra, was named for a neighbor of ours in Syria, who had a dog and was very kind to me when I was small."

Upon a request, Mr. Thomas produced a carefully typewritten sheet of paper listing the feats which Zaa-zaa will, upon request, perform. The list occupies an entire sheet. Enumerated, and among the tricks performed for the benefit of Penn State's are the following, among many: He'll go after a ball of paper, hunt around 'till he finds a waste basket, and drop it in; he'll put out a fire using his forepaws as a man would wield a broom; he'll protect any article designated—and really protect it; he'll jump over a cane at the word 'three', given in French or English, but won't budge one inch at the words, 'one-hundred-three', or 'three-hundred-three'.

Altogether, Ameer Zaa-Zaa will go through about fifty tricks, with infinite variety, and without a slip—with orders in any of three languages. Did somebody once class dogs among 'dumb' animals?

FIRST AID COURSES OFFERED TO CAMPUS POLICE FORCE

Members of the campus, the power plant force, the Alpha Fire company, and a local power company, will be offered a course in first aid training and rescue work by the department of Mineral Industries extension under the supervision of David C. Jones. Mr. Jones holds a certified training certificate from the Bureau of Mines in mine rescue and first aid work.

Upon completion of the course, which will be held weekly in Room 315, Mineral Industries, the members will be examined by a supervisor from the United States Bureau of Mines. Those passing the examination will receive a bureau of mines certificate of qualification in proportion to his proficiency.

STEIDLE TO SPEAK ON TRIP

Speaking on his recent trip through the Panama Canal, Central American Republics, Yellowstone National Park, and the Chicago Century of Progress, Dean Edward Steidle, of the School of Mineral Industries, will give a lecture in Room 315, Mineral Industries building, at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. Sigma Gamma Epsilon, Mineral Industries honorary, will meet following the lecture.

50 Students Take Complete First Year Course in Extension Service

Fifty students are receiving a complete freshman course away from the College campus, in a new center established by the teacher training extension department of the School of Education. Plans for these classes, which will be given at Sayre and Towanda, have been released by Dean Will Grant Chambers, of the Education School.

The move was caused by the present economic conditions, according to Dean Chambers. "There are scores of capable instructors who are unable to find employment at the present time," he said. "In addition, there are hundreds of high school graduates who would like to continue their education, but lack the necessary finances to do so."

Under this plan, these two groups of people are brought together. The students will be able to receive the same capable instruction as a cost this is not prohibitive, Dean Chambers believes. In addition, several professors will have been given an opportunity to return to work, he adds. The subjects to be offered at this center this year include English composition, history, social science, and French. In addition, instruction will be given in Spanish, chemistry, mathematics, and art, according to Dean Chambers.

teaching center of the Education School. Mrs. Edwin Zeller will teach French and Spanish. She was also formerly of the Pittsburgh teaching center.

The cost for each semester's instruction will be $100, Dean Chambers said. In addition, there is a dollar damage deposit fee, as well as ten dollars laboratory fees for the chemistry course.

The group of fifty will be divided into two groups practically equal, with about twenty-five in both Sayre and Towanda. The faculty will teach in the two towns on alternate days, according to the present plans, with the instruction being given in the high school buildings of the two towns.

Plans have been completed for a similar center in Bradford and Warren, Dean Chambers said, with classes beginning there Monday. "If these two experiments work out successfully, it is probably that others will be started in communities where there is no college easily accessible, providing a sufficient number of students are interested," he stated. "This plan will serve a two-fold
