Bane of Unwashed Boys Assumes New Role in Sculpture

Soap—long the bane of unwashed small boys, the malefactor that causes unwary bathers to perform eccentric gyrations in the tub—has finally come into its own, as an excellent medium for small sculpture. Little Willie, now handed a cake of soap, is quite likely to prove to astounded parents that he is a budding Phidias or Praxiteles.

That soap sculpture is no longer a fad is shown by the fact that over 2,000 models were submitted in the ninth annual contest for small sculptures in soap, conducted recently by a well-known soap company.

Over seventy of these models are now on display in the exhibit room of the Carnegie library, including several prize winners. The models include Roman masks and studies in

STUDENTS MAY KILL SKUNKS

Because of the increasing nuisance caused by the many skunks in the vicinity of State College, State Game Commissioner Thomas Woser has ruled that students and townspeople without licenses to hunt in the State may kill the animals as long as the skin is destroyed. Mrs. William F. Beech, chairman of the local civic committee of women's clubs, obtained the permission from the commissioner.
