Moss '30 Writes '20 Million Sweethearts'

Local boy makes good!
Paul Moss '30 is the author of the current attraction at the local theatre, "Twenty Million Sweethearts." Moss, after his graduation, was manager of a Pittsburgh radio station for several years. While there he became acquainted with Dick Powell. The two became close friends, and last year Powell wrote Moss and asked him to come out to Hollywood to write scenario.
Upon his arrival on the coast, Moss was employed by Warner Brothers. "Twenty Million Sweethearts" is a satire on radio telling what goes on "behind the mike" when the big acts go on the air. It is, in part, his experiences while with the radio station.

New Library

This is the seventh of a series of letters by Willard P. Lewis, College librarian, on the need for a new central College library building. This article deals with the necessity of a larger document room.

This library is a depository for United States government documents, as are all the land grant colleges and universities. As such it must continue to receive and make available the majority of such publications. Many of the courses in the various schools of the College require files of various state and municipal documents as well.

Hence we must look forward to a large collection of material of this kind and to a suitable place for storage and use. This means that the new building must contain a document reference room with special desks and tables and either a special stack or immediate access to a part of the general stacks.

Our collection of state, municipal and United States government documents is scattered at the present time in the Document Room; the stacks, periodical room and the reference room. The indexes to the documents are shelved in an entirely different alcove.

The bound volumes of documents are entirely separated from the current unbound issues. The Document Room, in the present building is in the basement, has bad ventilation and poor light with absolutely no room for expansion. There are no facilities at all for study or consultation of the books.

SOMERS NAMED COUNTY HEAD
Charlotte Somers '33 has been named home economics extension representative in Northumberland county. She succeeds Ruth Theophilus, who resigned in December.
