Leo Skemp and Jim Boring, backs, have not been heard from but are expected to return.

Dick Woolbert, veteran letterman, is the only tackle candidate missing, with Bob Weber and Francis Wiemer, lettermen, and Sawchak, Cromwell, Schuyler, Salisbury, Werner, and Fohe putting in their appearance.

Woolbert may be lost to the squad for good, a recurrence of a knee injury that bothered him considerably last year having made it impossible for him to report.

and are acting as line coach assistants in football.

Davis, in addition to his duties in football, will act as freshman basketball coach, replacing Gilbert F. Loeb who has left to become the new head of the department of physical education at Colby.

Davis was graduated from New Hampshire in 1920, received his master's degree from Harvard in 1927, and his doctor's degree from the University of Michigan. He has had experience in physical education instruction in six schools and colleges. He will serve here with the rank of assistant instructor.

Thiel was an outstanding lacrosse player at Syracuse, where he was graduated last June. He was chosen captain of both the freshman and the varsity teams and during the last two years acted as assistant to Roy Simmons, lacrosse coach. He has the rank of instructor.

will be provided with an individual wire basket, equipped with a combination padlock. The student will leave his gym outfit in one of these baskets between classes.

These baskets will be locked in tiers when not in use. When the student has a class he will unlock his basket, put on his gym suit, and lock the basket in a locker with his clothes, using the same combination padlock on the outside of the locker.

This plan eliminates the necessity of having a locker for every physical education student. Consequently, the locker room will be less crowded, and as a result, it has been possible to add several rows of lockers to the varsity side. Also, as Director Bezdek pointed out, it will end the possibility of theft in the locker rooms, which existed when two and three students used the same locker.

Class of '38 Marches On Without a Song

When the upperclassmen see the class of 1938 trudging into its first mass meeting Wednesday night, they will shrug and perhaps even shudder, and whisper among themselves, "It'll be the same old stuff. It's always the same. Nothing to it!" But they will be wrong! It won't be the same. In fact, it just can't be the same.

Of course, it will be somewhat the same as in other years. The freshmen will be there and so will Penn State's innumerable student leaders. And then, too, there will be representatives from all of Penn State's fraternities hanging around in the dark corners looking for possible rushees. But it will be different. Prof. Richard W. Grant, head of the department of music, says so.

In a telephone interview with the COLLEGLIAN Professor Grant said that this year there will not be a freshman song. Think of that! No melodious and yet invigorating strains to bind together the class of 1938 with the spirit of Penn State and rugged individualism.

But what the class of 1938 may lose in spirit it may gain physically. Without a freshman song, strained throats, larynxes and lungs, not to mention earaches, will be practically an impossibility in the class of 1938.

DO YOU KNOW—

That English composition was rated by prominent Penn State alumni as the most important single College subject?

That McAllister hall, now a women's dormitory, once was a men's living quarters?

That the Nittany Lion, symbol of Penn State's athletic prowess, was launched at Princeton University in 1906 on the occasion of a baseball game when a Penn State student in a flash of repartee said that nothing but a Pennsylvania mountain lion could stand before a Bengal tiger? That commencement exercises used to be held in the Schwab auditorium until the graduating classes became too large?
