Appendicitis Waylays Co-ed's College Career

There is at least one freshman co-ed who is still wondering what college is like. Helen Denman is her name. This lass came here on the first day of freshman week with pounding pulses and palsied hands, ready to embark on the great adventure of College. About an hour after she arrived here, she began to feel an unfamiliar pain in her mid-section. As the pain grew, she fled to the College infirmary and asked for a diagnosis. A few minutes later she was rushed to the Bellefonte hospital for an appendicitis operation. She is now back in the infirmary and will be confined there for at least another week.

Rogers To Speak Here

James Rogers, director of the National Recreation association, will lecture here on Saturday, October 6. Mr. Rogers' address will deal with the future of athletics, and is directed to physical education students.

Youngest Freshman Co-ed At College

Margaret Louise Holloway, of Wind Gap, Pa., is the youngest co-ed in Penn State's record freshman class. She is only 16 years of age. She is registered in the chemistry curriculum in the School of Chemistry and Physics and apparently is following in her father's footsteps for he, too, is a chemist. She was graduated from the Penn's Grove consolidated high school this June and was an honor student of the class.

'Average Professor' Takes 'Rap' From Columbia Teacher

Average college professors today are "muddle headed," according to Dr. R. Bruce Raup, of Teachers College, Columbia University. Raup produced statistics which he showed: the average college professor can't think clearly; he is unable to analyze problems thoroughly and logically; he is a "yes" man; he doesn't know anything about political, social and economic problems which do not bear a direct relation to the subject he teaches, and he cares less.

GOLF TOURNAMENT STARTS WITH 2 FLIGHTS OF 16
