what is wrong. The present solutions are not solid.

"It will take the initial forces of this country to solve this problem. We must use national devices. The federal government is the agent through which we must work. The N. S. F. A. has already submitted a plan for the solution of this problem.

Federal Youth Service

"This solution," declared Lang, "will provide a mouthpiece for youth. It will be known as the Federal Youth Service and will be a bureau in the Department of Interior—a step towards the centralization of our youth organizations, such as this one, of today. This would not be bureaucracy but a necessary social and democratic organization. It would end passing the buck in Washington and would place the responsibility on one branch.

Mr. Lang pointed out that this new bureau would conduct surveys and would try to find means to solve the problems of the youths who write in to it for aid.

Local Men Give Series Of Psychology Tests

Dr. Bruce V. Moore and Dr. Robert G. Bernreuter, of the education and psychology department, and Dr. Andrew Triche, of the engineering extension department, gave a series of psychology tests to a group of 162 apprentice applicants of the Allegheny Steel company in Brackenridge on January 4.

Sixteen with the highest rating were immediately employed and started in their courses. Twenty-six others will be employed elsewhere by the company.

Twisting The Dial

Ouch! And although we're still tottering as a result of Mr. Dickson's caustic castigation of our taste in picking programs, we now are prepared to acquiesce feebly in his indictment charging low-browism on our part. We agree that the average college student's attention should be directed to some of the more cultural offerings, and in due deference to the element so trenchantly represented by our critic, we have practiced up on our best Rotissie about-face. Consequently, more attention will be paid to the Better Things in Life from now on. Incidentally, it would be unfair to consider these rapid scribbles as expressive of any policy other than our own.

TODAY

Queenia Mario and Giovanna Martinelli, supported by a concert orchestra, are capable guest stars on WJZ at 8:30 . . . Another Met star in the person of lovely Grace Moore is slated for WJZ at 9 . . . or you might try Bing Crosby with the Mills Brothers on WABC at the same time . . . and one of these should please . . . Beauty Box Theater, with Jane Froman and John Barclay, in "Girl Crazy" on WEAF at 10 . . . or Glen Gray, Walter O'Keefe and Co., on WABC at the same hour.

TOMORROW

Mary Pickford in "Within the Law," heads a first-rate stock company on WEAF at 8 . . . Fred Allen may or may not be "on"—but try WEAF at 9 and see . . . compare Hall and Pendarvis at 12:30—WABC and WJZ . . . and come to think of it, Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra generally present a likeable program with opera stars as guests, on WABC at 9.

THURSDAY

Something really new—Phil Spitalny's all-girl ensemble, including women musicians, singers, and announcers—it's on WABC at 8 . . . Waring now has a full hour on WABC at 9:30 . . . Helen Jepson, new Metropolitan find, is the star of Paul Whiteman's Musical Hall on WEAF at 10 . . . and see if you don't think Little Jack Little, on WABC at 11, has improved his band technique considerably . . . Thassall.

Interviewer Learns Puppeteers Secrets

ly, while at other times they stand to one side or the other. Often the operator of one puppet will hand it over to another puppeteer while the character is still on the stage (although this exchange is done so deftly that it cannot be noticed by the audience) in order to be prepared for the next part of the program in time.

Tony Sarg started making marionettes as a hobby, but when he came to this country in 1914, he saw the possibilities in commercializing this pastime. His career began in London after seeing the famous puppets of Holden, an English puppeteer. Mr. Sarg attended forty-seven performances endeavoring to find out "how it was done."

His first venture was a reproduction of Little Nell's Bedroom, arranged by himself. Later he produced his first show in Dickens' Old Curiosity Shop which he rented for $44 a year, later re-renting the lower floor to a woman with an antique show for $300 a year.

Myers Produces New Tomato After Years Of Selective Breeding

Keystone, a new tomato developed at the College agricultural experiment station by Dr. Charles E. Myers, professor of plant breeding, has been released to growers following seven years of careful breeding tests.

The new tomato is characterized by a very compact growth which makes close planting possible. The foliage is rather coarse, medium dark green, and covers the fruit well. The fruit is formed in clusters, is evenly colored rich scarlet, and is unusually free from blemishes.

It matures almost as early as Penn State Earliana and is superior to that variety in shape and yield. The shape of the fruit is nearly spherical and the interior is a dark red with very little core, which is shallow.

Dr. Myers reports that earliness of maturity is a desired feature. During the past season four tons to the acre were harvested 115 days after the seed was sown in the greenhouse. Total yields of more twenty tons to the acre are possible when the plants are set twenty-seven inches apart in rows three feet apart.
