Woman Reporter Says Experience Necessary For Newspaper Work

"It is rather difficult for a Journalism School graduate to break into newspaper work right now," Miss Betty Reed, who covered the Hauptmann trial for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, declared in an interview.

Miss Reed began her newspaper career by answering the "Dear Editor, I Am a Lovelorn Young Maiden" column on The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. However, she believes that it is better for the inexperienced reporter to start on a small town paper.

When asked whether graduation from a school of journalism were necessary, she replied, "Anything you can cram into your head is of value in a newspaper career."

Women are still restricted to the society page and other so-called feminine departments on some papers, she explained regarding the opportunities of women in journalism.

Heads Disapprove of Cuts Lowering Grades

ment head would give no opinion and three were opposed to all forms of cut laws.

A preference was finally indicated by the department heads when asked the question, "Should it be left to the individual professors?" The answer was, Yes—nineteen, No—fourteen, and one not answering.

Three of the department heads were very emphatically against having the Board set up a rule. One department head continued to express no opinion, and one was opposed to all cutting laws on this last question.
