Dr. Anderson Writes Chemistry Text Book

Dr. Arthur K. Anderson, of the department of physiological chemistry, has written a book titled "Essentials of Physiological Chemistry," which was published by John Wiley and Son of New York. The book is designed for students in home economics and biological sciences. It furnishes a background for future courses in dietetics and nutrition. The subject of physiological chemistry is approached in such a manner as to serve as an elementary text for students who have had little training in chemistry. It is written for the non-technical layman. The book was written over a period of about four years, and came out on the market in October. Letters indicating the approval of the book have been received by Dr. Anderson and he believes that it will be adopted as a text in several institutions. It is Dr. Anderson's first book.

You'll see a good game on New Beaver field tomorrow — and that's the extent of your writer's predictions. It would be a rash man who would venture to make any more guesses after such fiascos of the two Saturdays preceding.

It wouldn't be fair to let another issue go by without mentioning something about the Syracuse game other than that sour decision. Credit Bill Cooper with the best kicking of the season, including a field goal that had no whiskers on it, absolutely none.

Then there's "Iron Man" Wear, who took a lot of bumps without being broken in two, as had been predicted by the wisecracks. Then there was outstanding play of Captain Weber and Economos, who did all they could. Knapp was the outstanding ground-gainer.

The debits are few but important: After a team spends a week in polishing up certain plays for the Syracuse defense, why doesn't it use these plays when in a position to do so? That sounds very much like Monday quarter-backing, but it's true, lamentably true, that these plays were absolutely ignored. The tackling was not outstanding, and a half-hearted tackle at an inopportune time meant the game, in combination with a pass that should have been covered.

The freshman football team will play Bucknell's yearlings tomorrow, but don't be optimistic about the result. "Neils Walke isn't, and for cause. The freshman schedule is one of the finest in many a year, and includes four away games. Therein lies the joker. The Senate Athletic Committee, in granting permission for four away games, set aside their usual policy for only two away games, and in return specified that on two of the trips second string men should be taken who had not gone on the other two trips.

This was a reasonable stipulation, and when injuries and withdrawals from school cut into the squad, the committee graciously agreed to let Walke take his first stringers on a third trip or take half first string and half second string men on the two remaining trips. The game with the Navy plebes is, of course, the game for which the coaches and players have been pointing all year. Consequently, the best possible line-up will be thrown against the boys at Annapolis. Ergo, the second string men, some of whom haven't been in a game yet this year, will play the young Bisons. Probably the game will be closer than if the regulars were to be in there. We still are of a mind that the second-stringers can beat Bucknell. Win, lose, or draw, we expect that the game will be just as interesting as the one on New Beaver tomorrow. Of course, Bucknell is back on the subsidy plan, this year's crop of freshmen being the first in some time to benefit by the switch. At least, that's what we are informed by a Lewisburg paper.

Quick kicks: We note with approval the stands erected on the soccer field. The soccer team faces its toughest opponent tomorrow, but on its own field should keep its unblemished record. Tony Sala, end for Villanova, did himself right proud on his last appearance locally—he won an Eastern Intercollegiate boxing title. He is expected to start against the Lions and if he goes as well as in the last game with Detroit, well... the harriers have an open date tomorrow and are concentrating on the coming ICA meet. We look for a much better showing this year than last, with genial Pete Olexy a sure bet to finish well up among the leaders—this fine showing is contingent upon the possibility of State's fifth man running a fine race, as fine as the race that will be run by Olexy, Book, Downey, and Trimble. There is a letter on page two that expresses a fine sentiment—but that is all... assuming that Syracuse would admit the possibility of a raw deal having been handed State by even considering a return game, there is always the difficulty of arranging a post-season game... we'd like to see that game, but it would certainly break all precedent for a school to come out and admit that perhaps their opponent had been hooded!

Professional wrestling has advanced one step further in its parade to the hinterlands, having now reached Altoona. People with aspirations to witness wrestling on a somewhat more brutal plane than the houseparty struggles will do well to drop over to Jaffa Mosque, where Dick Conlon, a new impresario in this field, has assembled a mob of grunt and groan men, headlined by Jumping Joe Savoldi.

If you like a good high school football game, why not drop up to New Beaver field Monday afternoon? Beaver field tomorrow — and that's what you should watch the Little Lions of State College High tackle the Clearfield bunch? State students will be admitted upon presentation of their A. A. booklet and twenty cents, which is half price and fair enough.

Committee Approves Freshmen Swim Team

Depending upon the appropriation of sufficient funds, the Senate Athletic Committee has approved the formation of a freshman swimming team early this week, it was announced by Hugo Bezdek, chairman of the committee.

If the appropriation is made, the Sealion yearlings will face Mercersburg Academy in a dual meet. It is probable that numerals will be awarded, although this will have to be discussed first by the committee.

In accounting for the fact that swimming was adopted first as a varsity sport this year and now as a freshman activity Dean Bezdek said that physical education authorities have long felt that the water sport is the best body developer there is. He pointed out that over a thousand students here are taking both the advanced and beginner's courses in swimming.
